

tion are found. In London there are 58 at work, in Budapest 14, in Constantinople 33, in Damascus 31, in Jerusalem 28. In other places from 1 to 5 men labor in this cause. The total number of Jews on the earth is about 6,400,000. Accordingly, there is one missionary for every 16,976 Jews. Concerning the success of the work, no complete statistics can be collected. However, as good an authority as the Jewish convert and missionary de la Roi says that at least 100,000 Jews have been converted since the beginning of the present century, and Dalman is satisfied that these figures are substantially correct. Of course this includes also those who have been won by the agents of the Roman Catholic and the Greek Orthodox churches, both of which are also active in this work, but not as much so as are the Protestant Societies, especially those of New England. Dalman's articles, of which we give here only a bare skeleton, are full of interesting details concerning this important though little known, and, unfortunately, often little loved field of Christian mission activity.

Foreign Missionary Societies of Germany.

DR. R. GRUNDEMANN published in several numbers of the Allgemeine Missions-Zeitschrift for 1885 elaborate statistical reports of evangelical missions throughout the world. Those tables were remarkably complete, but they cover nothing more recent than the reports of the years 1883 and 1884. In response to a request for information, Dr. Grundemann now kindly sends us in manuscript a statistical table of German societies covering the year 1887, and we gladly give the table here :
