Uncle Walt

hers

ine,

lads

cles

ght,

iry

old

the

leir

ink

ass

her

th,

Ιt

at's

ld,

ch-

nd

m-

he

nd

he

ed rs. od to

OU HAVEN'T much sense, but I love you well, O wild-eyed broncho of mine! Y ar heart is hot with the heat of hell, and a cyclone's in your spine; your folly grows with increasing age; you stand by the pasture bars, and bare your teeth in a dotard rage, and kick at the smiling stars. As homely you as the face of sin, with brands on your mottled flanks, and saddle scars on your dusky skin, and burs on your tail and shanks! and old—so old that the men are dead, who branded your neck and side; and their sons have lived and gone to bed, and turned to the wall and died. But it's you for the long, long weary trail, o'er the hills and the desert sand, by the side of the bones of the steeds that fail and perish on either hand. It's you for the steady and tireless lope, through canyon or mountain pass; to be flogged at night with a length of rope, and be fed on a bunch of grass.

The Broncho