The Tables Turned. It was time for baby-girl to be put to bed, but no amount of coaxing could take her. At last her father offered to lie on the bed until she fell asleep. Off she went, 'pick-a-back,' and the tred mother leaned back in her chair with a sigh of content ready for a hard-earned rest. Ten minutes, twenty, half an hour, and she was wondering when father would be down, when all at once she heard a soft, stealthy 'pit-a-bat.' Nearer came the steps, and then a little, white-robed fisure, with a tiny finger on her lip, stood in the doorway. in the doorway.

A Complaint and Its Result

"Toronto Railway Company, Complaint Department:

"Gentlemen,-Some two or three weeks ago the writer had occasion to complain that the Parliament Street cars going west would not stop at the corner of Carlaw and Gerrard when they were running into the barns. You replied that all cars were supposed to stop at this corner, whether or not they had instruction to return to the barns.

'You evidently took the matter up with your men on this line, as the service at the above-mentioned corner has been much improved, and all cars have stopped for passengers when signalled. The last two or three days, however, the conductors and motormen have gone back to their old practice of going right through and not stopping when signalled.

"Last Friday, at 6.10 p.m., I was waiting at this corner for "Last Friday, at 6.10 p.m., I was waiting at this corner for from 10 to 15 minutes before a car came along that was going down town. There were seven or eight others in the same position. I did not get the number of the first car that would not stop, but the second one was No. 670. The third car came almost to a stop, but as I suppose the conductor saw that there were no ladies to get on this car, he gave the two bells signal while there were still about six of us waiting to get on the car. I took his number and asked him why he did this, but he said he was running his own street car, and did not take any orders from would-be roadmasters. His number was 177, on car 418 ber was 177, on car 418.

"The above is not in the nature of a complaint, but is more for the purpose of finding out definitely if something can be done so that the cars will stop at this corner, as you have advised me that they are expected to do. If it is not possible to arrange this, I would be glad to know, as it would be a saving of time in many, cases to walk to Broadview Avenue.

"Yours truly,

"Nov. 28th, 1911."

Electricity is Nature's Medicine

president of the Society of Universal Science, in a recent essay, made this statement:—

"The only difference between a well man and an invalid is that the invalid is not producing enough electric power to run the functions of his body and keep the vital organs up to the necessities of life.

"With some 200 scientific experiments from recognized scientists it has been conclusively proved that this power is electricity; that by underst anding the laws governing the production and control of electricity in life, any human can cure himself in a few weeks, can increase his working capacity, can increase his vitality to the point of having an overflow of happiness and joy, and also that any person feeble from age may in the same way reinvigorate himself.

"When one falls into any form of disease, he simply does not produce as much electricity in his body as when well. We see, too, that age is just like a chronic disease, that one begins from ignorance of the laws of electric production to gradually decrease his generation of electricity until he finally reaches the point where he does not produce enough to keep his vital organs running. This means death. The same amount of electricity in a man of 30. This proves the prolonging of life a scientific matter of keeping the production of electricity up to the normal needs of the body."

To be strong and manly is the alm of every man, and yet how many we find who are wasting the vitality and strength which nature gives them. Instead of developing into the strong, vigorous, manly young fellows that nature intended them to be, they find themselves broken down and despondent—no ambition to do anything. They struggle aimlessly along, sooner or later to become victims of dreaded disease, their finer sensibilities blunted and their nerves shattered.

You can talk with the men and women who have been cured by my treatment, and that's worth considering. I might preach for years in my efforts to gather converts to my way of curing disease, and nobody would pay any attention to my

An American archaeologist with a great enthusiasm for the period of the Caesars was wandering about the Roman Forum one morning, when a woman poked her head over the wall. "Ho!" she said in the familiar accent of western New York. "What place is this?"
