The Charm of SWISS SCENERY

BY DELIA AUSTRALIAN

THE JUNGFRAU-RISE

Switzerland may well be called the land of the world, no other country has great a variety and grandeur of scenery. In this small Republic are seen jagged peaks, snow-covered mountains, deep glaciers, fertile hills, rushing waters, placid lakes and fertile valleys, where do the forces of nature blend so harmoniously. The tourist starts a trip on the Vierwaldstattersee to the shimmering waters of the lake, when he is enchanted by the aspect of mountains encircling the water. He wanders about the fertile valley Schaffhausen and is surprised by the shing waters of the Rhinefall, he goes to the mountains to St. Moritz and finds a placid lake several thousand feet above sea-level.

Proud though the Swiss people are of all its grandeur it is their mountains they love most, for these sublime, defiant ages have stood watch more loyally against foreign invasion during the centuries than the best disciplined army could have done. The greatest of the Alps, including Haller, Rousseau, Goethe and Schiller have immortalized the Swiss people, their scenery and legends in unending words.

There are many ways of becoming acquainted with Swiss scenery, the traveler may begin at the Rhinefall, come up from the south with the St. Gotthard or over the Bernese Oberland, but wherever he starts he is enchanted by the wonders of nature which surround him. Perhaps the most fashionable if not the most popular of all is the Engadiner railway, built thousands of tourists to make an annual visit to St. Moritz and Pontresina. The building of this railway has only increased the popularity of this beautiful country, and is a reminder of the tourists who come from all parts of the world.

This journey is to be made from the town of Coire. The train starts in a valley, but everywhere are seen steep mountains and foamy cascades breaking with swift leap over high ledges. Soon the train begins to ascend the mountains; in places the incline is so steep it seems impossible for the train to make the ascent, some of these mountains are bare and aged, others are clothed with pine forests and are watered by falls and cascades.

A VIEW OF THE VIERWALDSTATTERSEE

In places the mountains are separated by deep, gaping ravines, spanned by splendid iron bridges. Higher and higher the train until it reaches the village of St. Moritz. This smiling village is surrounded by a tall range of mountains. It is further attractive because of the small blue lake, the splendid walks through pine woods, the Kursaal with its tennis courts and the many spacious hotels. Not even at Ostend and Aix-les-Bains are seen so much gaiety and fashion as in this Swiss town situated many thousand feet above sea-level.

A beautiful jaunt is a three hours' walk to Pontresina. The path is bordered by deep forests on one side and the valley on the other. This village is surrounded by mountains and has a glacier at the farther end. Below is a moraine watered by a gentle stream, above are the great ice-fields.

Interlaken is a fair rival of St. Moritz, it also lies in a green valley and boasts of the Jungfrau as its richest treasure. It commands a beautiful view of the Lauterbrunn valley and the snow white Jungfrau. This modest valley is crowded with spacious hotels and adorned with beautiful gardens. At four o'clock the large verandahs and gardens are thronged with men and women sipping their tea and listening to the music played by some Italian or French orchestra. The favorite promenade is the Hohweg, an avenue of old oaks and planes extending from the village of Aarmühle to the upper bridge. But the favorite point for the traveler is the Jungfrau; the first ascent being the Kleine Scheidegg. The path lies through splendid woods in a narrow valley and beside a stream so turbid it remains one of a constant whirlpool. At Lauterbrunn the steep pine-covered mountains stand sentinel. Against this dark green background dashes the waters and spray of the Lauterbrunn falls. This is only a fair promise of what lies beyond.

As the engine makes the ascent on one side are seen the meadows carpeted with mountain flowers, gay with the tinkling bells of grazing cattle and the sounds of the mountain horns. On the other side are the glacier mountains, with their heads raised haughtily into the clouds. From this plateau one sees a whole chapter of snow-covered mountains, including the Schiltorn, the Wetterhorn, the Bergli stock, the upper Grindelwald glacier, the Finsteraarhorn, the Eiger-Moos and Jungfrau. An electric car takes the traveler up to the Eiger glacier.

One more ascent through a tunnel built under the glacier leads to the foot of the Jungfrau, smiling down on those who would mount to her summit. The trip home is made through Grindelwald, a valley surrounded by grass covered mountains, cooled by rushing streams. Not far from the train is a white, shimmering glacier.

Interlaken has a beautiful lake as well as fair mountains and the traveler going from Interlaken to Lucerne does well to make the trip by water. The lake of Brienz is a wonderful deep blue, the waters are surrounded by steep, jagged mountains, so steep that when the lake is misty their heads are veiled in clouds. At Gersbach the falls break over the side of the steep mountains in wild torrents.

The ride over the Bruin Pass is a lovely one; the train makes a gradual ascent of 1800 feet. Below are the fertile fields covered with fields of wheat and hay. On the side of the mountains are rich vineyards; the tall mountains in the background make a rich display of their deep pine forests. The charm of the surrounding is increased by many mountain torrents which come battling down over the mountain side. When the top is reached the beautiful lake of Lucerne is seen shimmering at one's feet.

Lucerne lies at one end of the lake, and is one of the most beautiful and popular of the Swiss resorts. It holds its reputation honestly for it has many things to attract the tourist. The entire front of the town is bordered by the shimmering waters of the lake and a delightful promenade set out with heavy chestnut trees. Along the Quai is the Kursaal which attracts great crowds of fashionable women who come and sip afternoon tea and listen to the music. The fashionable world also gather on the verandas of the splendid hotels built all along the Quai. On the other side are a great many handsome shops.

In addition to what the people have done for the tourists there is the broad expanse of water and the many mountains, so different and still so splendid. On the other side of the lake rises the magnificent, over-arching Platteau. In pleasant relief is the low, broad Burgensstock which is spread out so boldly as though it wished to hide the steep Stanserhorn behind. From the opposite side is seen the Rigi so large and broad it almost reaches the Stanserhorn at one point. There are many to make from Lucerne. He drives to Triben, where Wagner lived so long and wrote his Tristan and Isolde. From there he gets a magnificent view of the lake and Pilatus near by, daring and defiant. But a trip to Lucerne without seeing the Hohl Gasse, the chapel erected to Tell's memory would be incomplete. A charming walk skirts along the foot of the Rigi and the lake offering a magnificent panorama of Pilatus, Stanserhorn and the Bernese Alps. A beautiful alley of trees leads to the simple, historic chapel. Another interesting trip is to the small town of Stans, which lies at the foot of the Stanserhorn, and famous because the great Swiss hero Winkelried lived there.

Before saying good-bye to Lucerne the stranger must ascend the Rigi. He may go from Vitznau or Arth Goldau. As the train mounts the panorama broadens. The lake recedes and the beautiful green mountain comes into view. On the broad side herds of cattle are grazing and tourists making the ascent make merry with song and laughter. From the summit he has a beautiful panorama of the Zugerser and Vierwaldstattersee. Off in the other direction gleams the Rigi Scheidegg, the Glarish Alps, the Todi and Burgensstock, the Bernese Alps, the Uner and Unterwaldner Alps.

But the lake of Geneva does not blush for the Vierwaldstattersee. She boasts of Mont Blanc, the fairest of the mountains and a shore unsurpassed in beauty. Along the banks of the lake are wonderful vineyards, splendid hotels and handsome villas. Near Montreux and Vevey the mountains are very grand and steep and so high that on a misty day their summits are lost in clouds. At the head of the lake is the historical and romantic looking castle of Chillon.

There are other delightful excursions to be made from Geneva. The tourist has

has done for others it may do for you

CLARENCE HAMILTON.
"Enclosed you will find a recent photograph of myself, showing the growth of my hair since beginning the use of your Herpicide. Before using Herpicide, the top of my head was completely bald. I had spent between $25 and $50 on other remedies, but failed to derive any benefit until using your Herpicide. I cannot commend this remedy too highly to any with dandruff, baldness or falling hair."

WHILE CHRONIC BALDNESS is incurable, many cases of primary or incipient baldness have been completely cured with Newbro's Herpicide the ORIGINAL remedy that "kills the dandruff germ." Of course, the rational plan is to save the hair while there is hair to save, but even gone there is a fighting chance if the hair follicles are not atrophied. Herpicide stops itching of the scalp instantly.

KILLED BY A HORSE THIEF

Robt. Williams, Wealthy British Columbian Trader, Shot to Death.

Vancouver, B. C., Nov. 8.—Robert Williams, owner of half a dozen trading posts in Cariboo, was murdered in cold blood Tuesday afternoon at the crossing of North river, sixty miles north of Kamloops.

Walter Stout did the killing. Five Indians witnessed the tragedy and saw Stout escape. They jumped on their horses and galloped to police headquarters at Kamloops. Chief Constable Fernie organized a posse and started north yesterday morning to hunt for the desperado, who headed for Edmonton along the winter trail.

Williams was the largest trader in the country. One hundred miles north Stout had stolen two horses, but word was sent by Indians instructing Williams to prevent Stout crossing the river at his headquarters. Williams refused Stout permission to cross on the ferry, and Stout put a bullet through his heart.

MR. MCGUIGAN TO TAKE REST

Former Great Northern Official Denies That He Will Succeed Mr. Pottinger On I. C. R.

Montreal, Nov. 8.—A despatch from Toronto today said: "It is reported in Toronto that F. H. McGuigan, former fourth vice-president of the Grand Trunk, who went to join J. J. Hill and who suddenly broke off his relations with the Great Northern magazine last August, will succeed Mr. Pottinger, general manager of the Intercolonial Railway. It is understood that before going back to active railway work Mr. McGuigan will visit the old country."

Mr. McGuigan, who is staying at the St. Lawrence Hotel, had the above telegram read over to him this afternoon. He professed to be amused at its contents and emphatically denied the truth of the story. As to the suggestion that he is about to visit the old country before resuming work, Mr. McGuigan said: "I have no plans. All I can say is that I have made up my mind to take a good long rest."

JUDGE RITCHIE SCORES POLICE

Magistrate Makes Caustic Remarks in His Judgment On White Case.

In giving judgment in the case of Hatfield, the White Candy Company yesterday afternoon, Judge Ritchie spoke plainly regarding the condition of the sidewalks in St. John, and remarked that evidently the police were ignorant of the by-laws concerning obstructions. He was glad to see the business men have work to do, and perhaps they cannot manage at once to remove goods which may be dumped on the sidewalk. It may be a great inconvenience for the White company to remove this coal, but we would have to pass it up if we respected the convenience of everyone. The by-laws are very strict, and at one time were as strictly enforced. I distinctly remember when a carpenter was fined $2 for allowing a few shavings to blow down street.

"A man is liable if he tears up an envelope in the street, but we find large sheets of paper, bags, banana peels and all sorts of rubbish."

Judge Ritchie, in the course of a lengthy decision, scored the police. "It seems to me," he said, "that it was a somewhat peculiar proceeding that Police-man Howell, who represents the chief of police, is supposed to know and enforce the law, should be called by the defendants to prove their case. Is it that the police are not conversant with the law, or do they know it and do not enforce it, and thus violate their oath? The time was when I took the men upstairs and instructed them in their duty, but the mud."

"I am speaking mainly for the benefit of the police and for those who have violated the law, so that when this is reported the law may be better enforced."

Judge Ritchie then read a number of sections of the by-law and said they left no loophole. Section three provides that no person can order the encumbrance to be removed and sold, the proceeds of the sale being used to defray expenses of removal and to pay any penalty which may be imposed, the surplus, if any, to be paid over to the owner.

Section six states that any coal or firewood which is allowed to remain on the street after an order for removal by the chief of police or any policeman, may be regarded as an encumbrance and treated as provided in section six.

Section twenty-six names paper, shavings, dirt, dust and rubbish as matter not to be thrown in the street under a penalty of $2, and section twenty-seven includes water of any description.

BETTER THAN SPANKING

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W. 71, Windsor, Ont., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money but write her today if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

"I used to tell the policeman not to be unreasonable in enforcing the by-laws, but now I am glad to see the business men have work to do, and perhaps they cannot manage at once to remove goods which may be dumped on the sidewalk.
