

A FEW SIDELIGHTS ON WORLD'S SERIES

Fans Besiege Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb and Walter Johnson.

(New York Times.)
They can't lick us, pal!
It was 1:40 p. m. Tuesday and Clark Griffith was speaking. At 4:15 p. m. the Griffith prediction came true. A few minutes later Manager Griffith left his box to the left of the Senators' field headquarters, and as he departed to join his victorious warriors in the clubhouse he repeated, "They can't lick us, pal!"
This confidence, however, was shaken often during the afternoon. Clark had a chair, but it was seldom he used it from the time that "Big Boy" Babe Ruth struck across the plate on Earl McNeely until Marberry shot the third strike across on Kelly for the final out. Then it was that the Senators' chief tossed away the remnants of the ninth cigar that he had consumed during the more than two hours of hostilities. He had confidence in his boys; he had seen them come through triumphant after a strenuous campaign in the American League and he was sure that they had the same reserve and courage to carry them to a world's championship.
Griffith played a harder game, it might almost be said, than any man on his club. He seemed to look over every ball pitched by the three Giant hurlers, and the first time he relaxed was when Gougeon drove the ball into the right field stand in the third inning and put the Senators in front and paved the way for victory.
Just before the game a number of Washington friends crowded around Griffith, and finally one remarked: "Clark, how does it look for the boys this afternoon?" "They can't lick us, pal," was his reply.

Babe Ruth and Ty Cobb met at the Polo Grounds. In fact, they sat within three feet of each other, but during the ten minutes they were in such close contact not a word passed between them. Ruth was seated in the press box near the Senators' bench about a half hour before game time. The fans rushed him and for ten minutes he kept busy autographing score cards and rain checks. Cobb, who happened to be passing, was asked to sign his hand also. The only available chair was an across a small table from the Babe. Ty looked at Babe, then at the chair and without further ceremony took possession. The cameramen soon learned the location of the celebrities. Their machines made more noise than the rusty pen wielded by Babe. Cobb used a soft lead pencil. The Babe figured that he did not do everything from the port side, as it was noticeable that his pen was slanted by a muscular right hand.

The hardest working man on the field before the game started was Walter Johnson. He warmed up with his teammates along the third base line, but he was interrupted so often by autograph seekers that he was forced to give up. An unofficial observer said that within twenty minutes Walter had accumulated sixty-six persons. Then he wound up his task by posing with a couple of cameramen, one of whom required the support of a concrete box. Walter supplied the other support.

Big Bill Edwards was among those present. One of his callers was Al Johnson. Al looked at Big Bill, smiled, carefully dug deep into his right hand pocket and drew forth a compact package. He removed a part of it, passed it to Big Bill, smiled again, then walked away, highly polished cane and all. Investigation disclosed that Al had backed the Senators on Monday.
Nick Altrock and Al Schacht put on another entertaining act. This time it was their tight ropes and rowing numbers. Nick, however, forgot his comedy during the game. This was in the eighth inning. Umpire Quigley called the second offering to Jackson a ball. Harris, catcher, immediately made a vigorous protest. Nick also dashed out from the bench, but before he reached the dugout a quick "get back to the dugout" from Bucky silenced him for the rest of the afternoon.

Those new uniforms which the Giants wore for the first time on Monday showed the effect of service on Tuesday. Asked as to who was to open the station when it was completed, J. G. McMurtrie, who is in charge of the installation, said that it was hoped that Sir Henry Thornton would be present. The president was planning, so it was said, to make a trip through the martimes in the near future and it was hoped that the two events might coincide.

MAY VISIT THE MARITIMES SOON

Sir Henry Thornton is Expected to Open Broadcasting Station.

The C. N. R. broadcasting station in Moncton will probably be opened during the first week in November. Asked as to who was to open the station when it was completed, J. G. McMurtrie, who is in charge of the installation, said that it was hoped that Sir Henry Thornton would be present. The president was planning, so it was said, to make a trip through the martimes in the near future and it was hoped that the two events might coincide.

EXPELLED MEN SEE MR. LANDIS AGAIN

Dolan and O'Connell Heard Anew, But Situation is Unchanged.

New York, Oct. 8.—Jimmy O'Connell and Casey Dolan, expelled members of the New York Giants, appeared before Baseball Commissioner Landis this week and asked that their cases be reviewed by the commissioner. But when they had each talked with the baseball czar and had been dismissed from the interview their status remained as before—expelled.
Commissioner Landis reiterated his previous statements that he still was of an open mind regarding the case, and was receptive to any new evidence that might be presented, and he left the impression that when the world's series had become history and the baseball world had cooled down a bit it would give Dan Johnson and Barry Dreyfuss, baseball men who had challenged his conduct of the investigation of the attempted bribery scandal, all they desired in the way of a thorough and clean, sweeping investigation.
Dolan was first to see Landis. The expelled Giant coach had requested that his story be heard once more by the commissioner. Dolan's request was based on his own interpretation of Commissioner Landis's misunderstanding his testimony as given when originally questioned.
Dolan contended that when questioned by Judge Landis regarding his recollection of a talk with O'Connell on the Saturday when the Giants defeated Philadelphia and clinched the pennant, his reply had been "I don't remember," but that was not exactly what he meant to say.
Dolan told Judge Landis, "But what I wanted to say was that I knew nothing of the matter at all."
The judge listened to this latest testimony from Dolan, and later saw O'Connell. The commissioner refused to make public what O'Connell said, other than to state that the Coast player did not repeat any of his previous testimony. He said that, as a matter of fact, O'Connell had not changed his testimony in the least, and declared, so far as he was concerned, there were no new developments.
The interviews with these two men have not changed the situation or any position," declared the commissioner. "As I stated before and will state again, I still am of an open mind on the subject, and I am ready to go to the bottom of any new developments."

JAKE DAUBERT PASSES AWAY

Captain of Cincinnati Reds was Former Star With Brooklyn.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 8.—Jack Daubert, captain of the Cincinnati Reds, died early today at Good Samaritan Hospital.
Death came to the veteran baseball player after a valiant fight against complications which set in following an operation last Thursday for the removal of his appendix. Blood transfusion was resorted to yesterday but the illness had so advanced his vitality that it was of no avail.
This year Daubert participated in 102 games, was at bat 404 times, scored 49 runs, made 114 hits which included one home run, had five stolen bases and had a batting average of .281. He was formerly star first baseman with the Brooklyn Dodgers and was for years one of the leading hitters in the National League.

SOME PERFORMANCES BY BOSTON PITCHERS

Although the Red Sox finished in seventh place and the Braves in the cellar, Boston pitchers contributed two sets of notable performances to the season's records. Ehmeke pitched two two-hit games, one against Philadelphia and one against Philadelphia.

The Red Sox inflicted made two of the five triple plays in the American League season this year. Lee and Joe Harris accomplished one against the pennant winning Senators, while Lee and Shanks retired the side in one play against Cleveland.

TIME CHANGE HELPS THEATRE FINANCES

London Houses are Enjoying Biggest Boon for Months.

London, Sept. 22.—(By mail.)—There, the happy smiles in London's theatres. A West End playhouse is experiencing the biggest boom in attendance in many months.
"It's partly due to what has come to be known as the little social season, aided and abetted by a spell of weather which, if not ideal, is at least an improvement upon that which characterized the spring and summer months.
"The boom is undoubtedly due to the improvement in the weather," said one theatrical producer. "Also the evenings are drawing in. Daylight saving is always a blow at the theatre. Now people haven't time to play tennis before it gets dark, and in consequence they go to the theatre."
"It is perhaps unfortunate that the standard of plays is not what it was in pre-war days. There is a dearth of playwrights. No new names are coming along. Of course, there is an army of those who write high-brow stuff, but their efforts are wasted on the general public. We want men who can write popular plays."

NEW YORK WELTER WILL BOX IN CITY

The Commercial Athletic Club has arranged another big boxing show which will be staged at St. Andrew's Rink on Monday, Oct. 20 or 21. Two more bouts will be staged. The main bout is scheduled to go 10 rounds and is supported by an eight-round semi-final.
Jimmy Cox, sensational New York welterweight, will top the card and will probably match up with Johnny McElroy or George Fife. In his last start Cox counted with a knockout over Joe Riccardo at Albany. Prior to that match he defeated Paddy Ryan at Troy, N. Y. Cox has the distinction of having knocked down Dave Shade.

Cox has rapidly climbed to the top of the heap in New York and is noted for his hard punching ability. His sensational work in New York during the last season resulted in all the good boys of his poundage in the metropolis side-stepping him. According to Harry Wright, manager for Cox, Johnny McElroy refused an offer to meet Cox at Portland last winter, claiming that Cox was too heavy.
