revenue into the hands of a private company, then why not support a scheme which was to bring all the revenue into the pockets of the ratepayers? The greatest asset the city had got to-day was its unrivalled attractions, second to none on the Pacific coast. By adding to the natural beauty of the city a greater number of summer visitors, boarders and permanent residents might be induced to come here, thereby improving real estate and enabling the city to rely ultimately upon a permanent class of business. Edward Bragg seconded the resolution, and in doing so said he had two reasons for the position he took, first because ae thought it was desirable that the citizens should meet together and discuss public matters, and secondly because the improvement of James Bay flats and a permanent roadway would have to bc met by the ratepayers in the near future.
