Special Sale of Small Women's of daughter who had died in a Boston Hotel the postponement of a permanent policy could not meet the situation worthly. The case for postponement till a general election rested on the Nationalist emergency, and not on the German perli, or on the permanent menace of which the concentration in the North Sea is the indubitable evidence. Permanent perli means permanent policy, not postponement till you can have a general election about it. Those who deplore the moral effect on foreign nations of the seeming signs of Canada's hesitation may well consider the effect upon, say, Germany, of the repeated intimidations that the Government of the senior Dominion. Delieving that dire emergency exists, professes only a temporary policy; offers no supply of men; postpones for years the decision as to what it thinks Canada ought to do; and declines to take any chances over and above a three-years mometary grant, preferring to be governed by the chances of a prospective general election, in which a renewal of the votes of a section that is known to be hostile to united Empire defence must be a disquieting factor. This seathing criticism and analysis of the deplorable situation into which the and Misses' Dresses Boston, July 21.—Speading in a high powered automobile toward a Boston Hotel, where his daughter, Miss E. After taking the boy, Harry Somblosky, ten years old to the Naval Hospital, where he died, the anguished father was forced to wait until his chanfleur was arrested, charged with killing the lad. After giving a bond for the chauffeur he was able finally to resume his run to this city. When he arrived at the hotel, Mr. Beebe learned that his daughter vegistered there this morning, was taked ill this afternoon and sent for a physician, saying that she was suffering from poison. The doctor had difficulty in entering the room, and wher he was able to open the door he found the young woman dead. The cause of death, according to ah informal statement by the physician, was "heart trouble." Miss Beebe had been suffering from an nervous trouble for three years. She had been living recently at the family's summer home in Manchester, Mass. She was 25 years old. Medical Examiner Leary said Miss Beebe oommitted suicide by taking an alkaloid poison. We are of the opinion that one of these systems, in a modified form, adapted to our city, could be operated successfully. Such new system would necessarily have to be done gradually. Should your Board consider a system separating the land value from buildings, it would doubtless produce a larger revenue than at present obtained. It would also supply a need greatly desired, namely: measurements of all lands in the city. The land could then be assessed either on a foot frontage, or square foot. By this means, all land would be assessed at equitable values. We think this mode would improve the present system materially.
