It was half-past three when the police with their prisoner driving up Main, Dock and King streets, arrived at the station. The prisoneer sat on the front seat with the chief, while the detective was behind Collins, who seemed a mere boy beside his burly, captors. He has recovered in health from his trying pursuit and looked in the pink of health. His appearance is not at all vicious, and one could hardly imagine him the author of such a foul deed as that with which he is charged. He is very much as he has been previously described. He wore the handkerchief around his neck, the little cap and mud stained boots all according to the description. He was clean-shaven with the exception of the growth of two or three days.

Quickly taken from the carriage, he was led in the office of the deputy chief with whom he remained closeted told her I would tell Father McAulay the greater part of the afternoon. He was, however, taken out that photographs might be made. To the photographers, he proved a willing and ob-removed. A number of scars were also found on different parts of his body. The tattoo mark, the prisoner says was made against the wishes of his father, who afterwards tried to remove

The prisoner is full chested. His ears are small. His forehead high. When smiling his mouth hauls to the right side. He has three wrinkles running his cap on the back of his head.

COLLINS' STORY.

The story which Collins has told both to his captors during their long drive after his arrival here, was given will-ingly and without contradictions. The prisoner says that he was born at Liverpool, England, in 1885 and be came of age on August 9th last. He comes of Irish parentage. His father is dead, having been killed by falling down stairs. The whereabouts of his mother he does not know. In religion he is a Roman Catholic. He is unmar-

HAS BEEN A SAILOR.

For the last four or five years he has been a sailor and has sailed every sea. Previous to this visit he has often been to Amherst and talks intelligently about New York, Philadelphia, Montreal and other seaport cities. Three years ago he was in the city, having come here in the Numidian of ed manner, not at all in attempted bravado, but he viewed the mob as if the Allan line. On this trip he came wick to Amherst. While looking for work there a man offered him employment on a scow going to St. Mary's Point. When this job was completed and he had been paid off, he tramped through the country until he was en-gaged by Father McAulay at New Ire-

TIED UP ALL DAY IN THE BURNING SUN

BERLIN, Aug. 25-Herr Horn, the Governor of Togo, German West Africa, is about to be tried for brutalities perpetrated on natives.

The specific charge is that of inhuman punishment imposed upon a boy accused of stealing a trifling amount was put through various tortures by persisted in declaring his innocence.

After a term of imprisonment and twenty-five lashes at the whipping post, Herr Horn ordered the boy to be suspended from a flagstaff, choosing a burning hot day, when the or-deal would be all the more terrible. From time to time the governor visited the scene, and mckingly imitated the boy's pitiable cries for water.

The governor left next day without inquiring as to the boy's fate. When, however, he returned a few hours later he found the lad dead.
