MOTHER'S DAY HIGH NOW AT

Time honored custom well followed out in this city—Special church services.

Those in the city who promoted the observing of Mother's Day feel gratified at the manner in which the citizens generally carried the idea out. The day has now been named throughout America as the one day of the year dedicated to mothers. While in recent years Mother's Day has been observed in St. John, it is true that it has never before been so widely observed in this city as it was yesterday, and it appears that as the years pass the importance of the general public. The red and white flowers, the outward sign of honoring Mother's Day, were much in evidence about the city and it seemed as though the greater portion of the public had set out with the intention of observing the day.

While roses were the general decoration carnations and other flowers were also worn.
