

not charge him with anything wrong. I will continue under my oath and say this: I won't ask a vote of a committee to clear me of this charge. I won't ask a committee of the House to clear me before the public of the slightest suspicion of fraud or dishonest action in this matter. I will say that you cannot find ten gentlemen on the Liberal side who will stand up and say "John Costigan, you have acted dishonourably in the slightest degree from the beginning to the end of this matter." Is there anything further gentlemen?

THE CHAIRMAN—No, that is all, Mr. Costigan.

The Committee adjourned.
