Roseen Dhu

(From 'the Pall Mall Gazette.) In the gray light when moths flying And the weary feet go home

There's a wild voice calling and cry-Over the cold salt foam. Is it the voice of the sea that's wail or the wind in the clover dew? Tis my heart that makes lament unavailing

For you, for you, for you!

O, Roseen Dhu! O, the darkness of your eyes, And your honey dropping smiles, your blossom-breathing

'All the day I sorrow, in a lonely place apart.

For the sweet rose, the dark rose, the red rose of my heart!

And the weary dreams go home, soul, in the seas of silence wad

In the gray light when stars are fad

Sobs in the cold salt foam; And the wind companions my com From the fields of the clover dew;

And my empty arms are seeking and straining To you, to you, to you!O, Roseen Dhu! O, the darkness

Irish Carpet Weavers

The brillian rugs and carpets woven by the deft fingers of women and girls in remote Persian villages after a method of old Babylon, have always been highly valued by those whose wealth enables them to gratify their taste for rare and beautiful who, with fingers as deft as those of their eastern sisters, and an eye for color even truer and more artistic, are able to produce on the self-same ind of loom as used in Persia rainbow tinted rugs, and carpets which rival, if they do not surpass, in color and design, the products of these Oriental looms,

FOR THE FARMERS' PROFIT. Another important feature of the new industry is that it will give wonderful impetus to the rearing of sheep by the Donegal farmers. The carpets are made entirely of wool, and it is part of the scheme that all thewool used in their manufacture shall be spun from the fleece of sheep reared in these mountain regions. It has been calculated that in few years the fleeces of 10,000 score of sheep would be required annually For those girls who live too far away to attend a factory, a simple arrangement has been contrived by means of which, after having learned the art, they can take the frame ooms away in the seclusion of their nountain homes. Who can tell how much the artistic instincts of these children of the mountains may quickened by the magical effects of light and shade on those mighty

Wherever these beautiful productions are known they are highly appreciated, especially by lovers of things artistic. Orders have been received at Killybegs from the highest decorative art critics in England and America. The Donegal "Parisian" carpets have undoubtedly a most successful future before them.

ERIN DOLLS.

Another new industry which has sprung into existence in Ireland within the last few years is the Erin doll industry, started by a clever Irish woman who has discovered a method of making unbreakable

Taking as her model various dis tinguished personages, she faithfull and artistically reproduced their features. Thus we have perfect models of the King, the Queen, Prince Edward of Wales, Lord Roberts, etc. Different types of nationalities are also accurately reproduced. In every instance the utmost care and attention are paid to every detail of dress characteristic of the individual or type of individual which it is sought

These Erin dolls are known far and Of the green shores of Erin, the Gem wide, and are to be found in the nurseries of the highest in the land, of Donegal are Irish peasant girls first to recognize their merit by purthe Prince of Wales being among the chasing some of those shown at the sale of Irish work held in London on St. Patrick's Day.

So numerous are the orders received that it is almost impossible to keep pace with the demand. Although all the features are modelled by one hand, the making of these dolls finds work for scores. Lady Dudley has paid a visit to the Dublin depot. Her Excellency displayed the keenest interest in all the details of manufacture, and manifested her appreciation of the new industry by giving an order for a number of dolls to be especially modelled according to her directions. It is hoped that Queen Alexandra, who has always given her hearty support to Irish industries will buy Erin dolls .-London Express.
