Abigail Again.

SEE by the papers, says a writer in "Pick-Me-Up," that some worthy people in high places are getting a little tired of the servant girl question, and now there is a proposal to bring boys up to the job. What will become of the balance of the girls willing but not henceforward able to take to service, is not stated. Perhaps the English language is too abrupt and practical to permit of any reliable statement of the kind. But, of course, it's the old trouble. When mistress and maid fall out the fault is always the maid's. We never hear of any society maid fall out the fault is always the maid's. We never hear of any society for proving mistresses in the wrong. And poor old Abigail is down again!

I think before people lay the blame too heavily on Abigail they should search their own hearts and see if there is no fault in themselves. Just because the family thinks it would like to have breakfast at eight o'clock in to have breakfast at eight o'clock in the morning. Abigail's night's rest is practically broken from seven a.m. on-wards. First there is the alarm clock, which rattles like the Day of Judgment; and just as she has turned over ment; and just as she has turned over and gone to sleep again, the electric bell over her head starts its infernal clatter, interrupting her in a most lovely dream just where she and the milkman's young man had arranged to get married as soon as he could get trusted for a suite of kitchen furniture and a regulation four-poster. And as a final blow she has to sit up in bed and hear the master downstairs offer-ing to run up and drag her out of bed, and near the master downstairs offer-ing to run up and drag her out of bed, while the missis is declining the offer with some energy. No thanks. scales are so small that the rings Zeitung, the rings on the ear, or hearing stones, afford a sure clew to

How much nicer it would be to treat Abigail like one of the family. Now and again it would show a very good feeling if the head of the family went off to the city without his breakfast rather than disturb Abigail in her second go of beauty sleep. When employers meet together and talk of Abigail's sins, it never seems to occur to them that they might win her over by a timely display of generosity. Nobody seems to think anything of it if missis comes down to breakfast in a dressinggown. She chooses to do it, and that is enough. But if Abigail waits at the breakfast-table in a red flannel petti-DIAMOND DYES coat, fastened over her shoulders with a safety-pin, the harsh remarks that are heaped upon a poor orphan girl are positively brutal. What Abigail objects to so much is the perpetual fault-finding. Suppose she does drop a plate on the ground and break it? A plate must be broken sooner or later in the ordinary course Dyes on all wool, mixed goods and all cotton goods are admired by all ladies There is a depth, fulness and richness in Diamond Dye colors that manufacof nature, and, as Horatius said when he called for volunteers to defend the narrow pass, we may as well pick it off turers of other home dyes have never as wait for it to drop on us.

In many households it is quite a usual thing to keep a common, irresponsible cat of indifferent moral character, and to let it have the free goods hold together. Colors produced by the common package dyes are dull, run of the place. If the cat does any-thing wrong, the missis at once blames —Abigail. Is it any wonder that the muddy and streaked, giving full proof of adulterations and worthless color-ing ingredients. When it is generally understood that Diamond Dyes with eryant girl has turned at last after centuries of injustice? If the cat should get the key of the beer cask and go down and draw off a modest quencher, it's as likely as not that Abigail is observed with having taken the beer for all their superior qualities and a guarantee of perfect work are sold at sold at same price as the poorly pre-pared dyes, it will be a difficult uncharged with having taken the beer for her favorite policeman, when it is well known that he is a teetotaller and only dertaking to find a woman who will risk her goods with the dangerous adulterations out up in imitation of eats cloves to improve his complexion. As every naturalist is well aware, it is As every naturalist is well award, quite a common thing for a cat to run round to the pawnbroker's with a couple of the best tablecloths till the end of the month; but as sure as anything. Send your address on a postal card to The Wells & Richardson Co., Limted, 200 Mountain St., Montreal, P. Q. and you will receive post paid, full range of designs in the new Diamond Abigail will be charged with the offence, just because the ticket happened to fall out of her petticoat pocket. Most un-

The way to solve the problem is not for the mistresses to entrench them-selves on one side and the maids on the other, and speak in harsh and incon-siderate language of the opposition. As Lord Rosebery says, the way to make peace is for two travelers to arrive at an inn and have a drink or something of that sort, and drop hints of mutual concessions in between the sips. The mistresses should meet the maids casually and get some idea of the basic principles of domestic service as govrned by the natural aspirations of both sides. As I make it out, the poin of view of the mistresses will be that they want a girl who will always get up at six in the morning, who will al-ways look neat and tidy, and who will be talked at in a loud, rasping voice from the attic to the cellar once answering back in the dreamy, picturesque language of Bermondsey.

From the maids' point of view, I understand it is considered essential that a bicycle should be kept on the prema bicycle should be kept on the premises exclusively for kitchen use, and that the offensive habit of locking up the plano and hiding the key will be discontinued. It will also be necessary that the objectionable practice of counting the bottles of sherry in the larger, and the mines ples in the larger. This is not a declaration implying that the manufacturers of Malt Breakfast Food have a vast fortune in this popular breakfast food, nor does it mean that the grocers and dealers who sell it expect fortune cellar, and the mince ples in the larder, should at once cease, as this sort of thing is calculated to imply distrust and want of confidence. The question as to the privilege of wearing the missis's sealskin jacket or her new hat is not definitely settled; but it is understood that a concession of this sort would go far to remove the bad blood that has been stirred up in this unfor-"For several years indigestion and general stomach troubles frequently were so severe as to keep me away from business, and as a consequence many matters to which I was obliged tunate controversy.

Mrs. or Miss?

UST as a sort of New Year's card, the Woman's Suffrage Society of Paris have issued a manifesto contending that, as woman in her maiden name accomplishes all the duties of a citizen, she does prejudice to her interests by sinking her identity and losing her individuality in adopting the name of her husband when she marries. Consequently, it seems on the tapis that in future, when Miss Smith marries Mr. Brown, she will still retain her maiden patronymic of Smith. Being married, she must of necessity be Mrs.; therefore, if she retains her maiden name of Smith, we shall have the weird anomaly of Mr. Brown and Mrs. Smith as man and wife. Now, supposing Mrs. Smith, oth-Mr. Brown and Mrs. Smith as man and wife. Now, supposing Mrs. Smith, otherwise Mrs. Brown, should, by any unforeseen event, meet with a Mr. Smith in the absence of her husband, and it should go forth to the world—in a hotel with the man a should go for the world—in a hotel with the man and the should go for the man and the should go for the man and the visitors' book, for instance—that they were actually Mr. and Mrs. Smith, where the dickens, in the event of trouble, would Mr. Brown come in? Mr. Brown might swear by all that was holy that Mrs. Smith was Mrs. Brown, but if Mr. Smith swore that she was Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Smith did not stoop to deny it, what jury outside lunatic asylum could convict Mrs. Smith of playing fast and loose with Mr. Brown? It is a complex problem, to say the least of it; but if the Woman's Suffrage Society of gay Paree are not content to let well alone, I suppose they must put up with the conse

A Girl's Daring Feat.

T seems hardly possible that a girl of sixteen should save nearly fifty people from a terrible death. Yet that is what Grace Bassell did, who may well be called the Grace Darling of Australia. It happened one day in De-cember that a vessel was wrecked of the coast of Australia, a few miles from the Bassell home. The lifeboat on board the steamer was lowered, but it capsized and the eight people in it were drowned. So the rest of the crew clung drowned. So the rest of the crew clung to the sinking steamer. The surf ran so wildly that no one could dare swim through it, and there was not a house or person in sight. The girl, who was a splendid horsewoman, was riding along with a native servant. She caught sight of the vessel in distress; turning her horse's head toward the coast, she started him on a quick gallop. When she reached the sea she urged her horse into the angry surf. She rode boldly on till she reached the vessel. With great difficulty she took some of the children in her arms and put them before her on the saddle; then, with bigger children and women clinging to her dress, she started for the shore, gave those she had rescued to the care of her servant, and returned to the care of her servant, and returned again to the wreck. So she went backward and forward for four hours, till all were safe on land, the servant having ridden to bring out the last man,-

'Leslie's Weekly."

S OMEBODY is about to publish a vindication of the characters vindication of the character of English weather. It appears that it has been most unfairly misrepre-sented. What we stupidly call its ficis really nothing in the world but a perfectly laudable effort to reproduce in our midst the imperial nature of our climate, remarks "Outlook." When it presents us with primroses in November, that is to remind us of the pleasant picnic weather they are hav-ing on the veldt; the same laudable intention accounts for June snow-storms. Nor do ..e have to wait for complete reversals of the seasons. A week of imperial weather—sometimes, like a cheap trip, it is all crammed into one day-runs somewhat as follows: Monday, fog (home produce); Tuesday Monday, fog (home produce); Tuesday, cricketing weather (Australia); Wed-nesday, skating (Canada); Thursday, waterspouts (various ocean territor-les); Friday, steaming (West Coast); Saturday, general imperial representa-tion; Sunday—but the British Sunday has a climate of its own.

Edison's Prophecy.

Mr. Edison's latest theory is that by and by we shall be able to do without sleep altogether, as by the more perfect processes of electric lighting it will be difficult to tell night from day, and we shall forget when bedtime comes round. The man of the future is evidently going to live pretty rapidly. It was only the other day that we were told that square meals would be a thing of the past in the good time that's coming. Instead of laboriously working your way through seven or eight courses, all you'll have to do will be to go to the nearest chemist and buy a few pills with the nourishment of a city dinner concentrated into each. In the face of these conditions one feels sed to urge the races unborn to stay where they are for their own
