Robert Gouinlock Is Dead

Robert Gouinlock is Dead.

Toronto, Feb. 19.—One of the oldest commercial travelers, and probably the oldest in the grocery trade, died yesterday morning at 10 o'clook. Robert W. Gouinlook was known from one end of the Dominion to all the others. For nigh forty years he had traveled out of Toronto. Coming here in 1869, at 21 years of age, having been born at Paris, Ont., on March 3, 1848, the son of the late Walter Gouinlock, he first entered the employ of Charles Moore & Co. From there he went to Michie & Co., and from them to Perkins, Incs & Co., in 1873. With the latter firm he remained until his death. He was the second of a large family, including Messrs. John, James and George, the last the architect of the exhibition, the Temple and other buildings—and five sisters. The deceased never married.

Montreal, Feb. 18.—(Special.)—Cable advices from Laverpool and London on Canadian cattle were weaker and noted a decline in prices of ½c per lb., with sales at 11c. Exports of cattle from Portland and St. John, N. B., last week were 2558.

Receipts of live stock at the Montreal stock yards, west end märket, for the week ending Feb. 18. were 1905 cattle, 1136 sheep and lambs, 3912 long, 335 calves and the offerings to-day were 700 cattle, 1130 sheep and lambs, 3912 long, 335 calves and the offerings to-day were 700 cattle, 1170 hogs, 50 calves. In sympathy with weaker advices from European sources on Canadian bacon and a decline in prices of two to four shillings in Liverpool, and one to two in London and Bristol, coupled with increased supplies of hogs here to-day, a weaker feeling developed in the market and prices declaned 10c per 100 pounds. At this reduction there was a good demand from packers and dealers and some sales of selected lots were made at $7.40 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars, but a good many holders would not accept this figure, as they wanted $7.50 and in some instances as high as $7.65 was asked, consequently trade was slove. Accidental Death of Capt. George A. MacBeth of London At Welseley Barracks By a Revolver Shot

MacBeth of London At Welseley
Barracks By a Revolver Shet.

London, Feb. 19.—A sad accident occurred at an early hour yesterday morning at Wolseley Barracks, when one of London's best known and most popular young men. Capt. Geo. A. MacBeth, lost his life by shooting. The military authorities are reftcent in regard to the affair, but it would seem that Capt, MacBeth and Major Mills were in the sitting-room chatting quietly together about 1 o'clock, when the conversation turned to a revolver that Capt. MacBeth had taken with him when he went on a trip to Cobalt. Capt. MacBeth observed that he had not seen the weapon since he came back and left for an adjoining room to get it. Soon afterwards Major Mills heard the report of a weapon, but thought that the Captain was playing a practical joke.

MacBeth, however, did not return and on antering the room Major Mills found the Captain lying dead on the floor with a bullet would behind the right ear. The Coroner investigated the case and was accidental.

Capt. George A. MacBeth was in command of No. 10 Co., R.C.R.I., at the barracks and was an efficient and highly esteemed officer. He served through the Boer war with the No. 1 Company, R.C.R.I., men, who went from London, He was shout 30 years of age and son of Col. John MacBeth, Clerk of the High Court.

Olcott who visited America Iast year, sailed for India in October. On the voyage he fell down the hatchway of the steamer and was confined for a month in a hospital at Genoa, Italy. Subsequently he recovered sufficiently to continue his journey, but upon his arrival at Ceylon he suffered a relapse and since then had been in a more or less precarious state of health. Death on Sunday was due to heart failure. Col. Olcott was 75 years old.

It is probable that Mrs. Annie Besant will be elected president to succeed Col. Olcott. Meanwhile the work of the society, which is an incorporated body, will be continued by the proper officers, in whom the property and valuable library at Adyar is vested.

Investigation At Toronto Into An Alleged Attempt to Suborn the Chairman of License Commissioners

vious ways of hotel financing, as revealed before Commissioner J. R. L. Starr yesterday in his investigation of license matters.

But the story of how a $6,000 house by a change of Government jumps up to $32,000 in a little over a year sinks into insignificance beside the story of J. F. Hynes, described by one witness as a speculator in hotels.

According to the tale he told under oath yesterday, there was a defiberate plot to suborn the chairman of the license board (Dr. Wilson) with a $1,000 cheque.

Another amazing feature follows. Dr. Wilson having engaged a solicitor to ferret out and prosecute the sender of the cheque, was ultimately lulled into peace by a letter of explanation from the lawyer. According to the story of Hynes, however, the lawyer having failed to sell the cheque back to its sender for $1,000, engaged with him to put up a plausible story to account for the sending of the cheque, and accepted a retainer of $50 to act for the man he was hired to investigate. Both the cheques, the one for $1,000, and the one for $50 were exhibited yesterday, and the lawyer in question, James Ferguson, will tell his side of the story to-day.

TO LIVE FOR 100 YEARS

WHO ATTAIN CENTURY MARK HAVE VARIED EXPERIENCES.

Do Not All Agree Upon the Reasons Which Conduce to Great Longevity -The Ancient Search For Long Life-Consideration of the Question Through Mrs. Osler's Recent

One of the most disappointing features of extreme age is that those who attain it are unable to agree on the reasons that conduce to it. There can be little doubt, for example, that the kind of life led by Mrs. Featherstone Osler is quite different from the lives led by many other centenarians, says the Toronto Mail and Empire. The wife of a pioneer missionary in Ontario, Mrs. Osler no doubt had her share of hardship in the earlier years. One might therefore conclude that a certain amount of roughing it was favorable to extreme age, but modern science gives no authority for this belief. Some supposed experts go so far as to say that the more care one takes to avoid exertion and hardship the better is one's chance of reaching the century mark. It is well known, for example, that Mr. Chamberlain, who is a young man at 80, never takes a step that he can avoid. He shuns exercise, and yet his health and mental vigor are remarkable.

Beneficial Hardships.

Beneficial Hardships.

In favor of the theory that hardships have a most beneficial effect on the human constitution may be cited the notorious longevity of soldiers, especially of those who have been fortunate enough to draw pensions. It is quite recently that the United States Government has ceased paying pensions to some soldiers who fought in the War of 1812. Hiram Cronk, of Oneida County, N.Y., at the age of 103 applied for an increase in his pension allowance. He did not actually fight in the war, but he enrolled, and so became entitled to a pension. An even more striking illustration of the healthfulness of exposure is furnished by Izai Rodofoski, a Russian, who was recently reported alive in Warsaw at the age of 136. Up to his 128th year Izai was in full possession of all his faculties, but age came upon him in a single stroke, and when last heard of he belonged to the dead ratter than the living, for he could neither see nor hear and had no sense of feeling.

Some Venerable Citizens. Beneficial Hardships.

Some Venerable Citizens.

Some Venerable Citizens.

Next, in point of antiquity, comes an American, Noah Raby, who, at the time the facts were gathered, lived in a poorhouse at Piscatamay Township, New Jersey, and was 129 years of age. Like the long-lived Russian, Raby had spent most of his life out of doors, working as a farm hand, and afterwards as the overseer of a plantation. He never slept more than six hours a day. Another of the world's centenarians is a Servian, Osman Turrenzi, who claims to have seen 126 winters. His principal food has always been grapes and nuts. Altogether 218 cases of persons ranging in age from 95 to 136 have been reported upon. These reports go to show that to be abstemious of diet, a hard worker, an early riser, and to live in the open is the way to acquire length of years. In many cases of remarkable longevity it has been found on enquiry that the parents enjoyed a very long span of life.

The Ancient Search For Longevity.

The Ancient Search For Longevity.

It is on record, or, at all events, legendary lore so relates, that the Egyptians tried to extend their term on earth by liberal indulgence in sudorifics and emetics. Frequent perspirations and emetics. Frequent perspirations and emetics twice a month were supposed to remove from the system the elements making for dissolution. The Pharoahs were certainly wiser than their successors, for the Turkish bath is a good thing, while the stomach, unless carefully attended to, is known to be the seat of many complaints. It would have been well for the men of the Middle Ages if they had had the common sense of the Egyptians. These people, however, resorted to astrology, and all sorts of absurd nostrums, in the hope that they might escape the common lot of all. The astrologers did a roaring trade among the well-to-do, telling them what stars were adverse to them and how to dodge these celestial enemies.

Resort to the Talisman. Resort to the Talisman.

The amulet and the talisman were consequences of the belief in astrology. It was supposed that certain metals could counteract the influence of a man's evil star upon him. Thus, persons traveled with necklaces of iron or bracelets of copper to keep the star at arm's length. The carrying of a potate or of a horse chestnut to ward off rheumatism must be the modern adaptation of this fashion. While the astrologers labored with the stars, other equally potent operators made search for the "Elixir of Life," doses of which, taken "three times a day in a little water," were expected to restore youth and to postpone death. One man—a count—professed to have produced the decoction, but when the liquid was closely examined it was found to be a mixture of sandalwood, fennel, and senna. Another count, Oagliostri by name, made a great fortune in France by the production nad sale of an "Elixir of Life," which was nothing more nor less than a stimulant, producing unnatural activity on the part of patients, and requiring to be used constantly and in increasing quantities. It must have been the forerunner of whiskey!

The Fountain of Youth.

In all probability it was the success

The Fountain of Youth.

In all probability it was the success of this charlatan that induced Ponce de Leon, one of the pioneer visitors to the Continent of America, to make his journey hither. This man had heard that somewhere on the Western sea there was an island upon which the fountain of perpetual youth was forever pouring forth its valuable waters. Persons partaking of the stream could not possibly get old, try as they might, and death was out of the question. A table water having this virtue would bring a splendid price per bottle. Ponce de Leon sailed for America bent upon the discovery The Fountain of Youth.

Florida water, it is well to remark, is not the beverage in the search of which Ponce met his end. After the astrological and medicinal experiments had failed animal magnetism was tried for the purpose of prolonging life. Mesmer, a Frenchman, was the discoverer of this treatment, and from him we get the mesmerism of to-day.
