A Tale and a Moral. To the Editor of THE ACADIAN. DEAR SIR,-May I seek your column and relate briefly an amusing story, yet a tragedy of no mean proportions?

I was on board the morning express from Halifax a few days ago and chanced to meet an old friend of mine from Philadelphia. We shall call him Mr. R. for short.

Most of us in Halifax would think he was being 'done' if the rate of taxation was $2.70 for water privilege alone--think of it, higher than Philadelphia! I am afraid the Hantsport people know they have been 'done' now; but it is no purpose crying over spilt milk, even if it is as cheap as water.

Moral: Do not contemplate any great movement of public ownership before you are sure the results and privileges are going to materially benefit the people.

A Reminiscence. In 1883, twenty-five years ago, the Protestant clergyman of the town of Bridgewater joined in a written agreement that they would refuse to attend the funeral of any person who died while engaged in the liquor traffic.
