hurry.

thing I did then was to hurry as moment were my last, as though the world which now seems so rich in everything, held only one prize which might be seized upon before I arrived. Since then

I have tried to recall, like one who struggles to restore the visions of a fever, what it was that I ran to attain, or why I should have borne without rebellion such indignities to soul and body."-David Grayson.

What are you hurrying so for? Do you really, need to? Would anything terrible happen it you should stop and breathe?

Is it worth while? It seems to me that three out o four Americans could put those questions to themselves with good results. On a post card the other day I read this sage advice-"There is no time to lose in hurrying; man was not made in thirty seconds, nor yet in thirty minutes."

The philosopher of the postcard did not sign his name, and give me a chance to give him credit, but I think he certainly deserves credit for reminding us of something most of us sadly need to remember.

We often ask why it is that we do not make such durable furniture, build such lasting houses, or do any work in the "for-centuries" way in which our grandfathers did it? Have ve lost the knack?

No, we haven't lost the knack, but e've lost the time. In a public library the other day, asked for a certain volume and was told that it was sent to be bound and wouldn't be back for two or three nonths. "Why does it take so long?" asked in wonderment. "Oh we send hem abroad," they explained, "we can't get any such work done in this

Editor Evening Telegram.

Some years ago, if I remember ightly, one of our leading clergymen rotested through the Press against he seemingly blasphemous use of purposes, and his objections were reived favourably by the general pubic. On reading one of the evening apers I notice a certain vendor of oods, who conducts business on Water Street, offering advice to purhe East and look for the Star" beore they buy elsewhere. the new novelty corded silks are much in evidence. Terry cloth, particularly in white, is considered a very smart trimming and is being used in the better class of suits.

Beautiful little silk aprons of changeable taffeta in black or delicate shades of color are both lovely and useful for needlework or little household tasks. These are cut heart shaped, round or pointed.

A great feature is being made of buttons, and many clever ball and square effects are seen in bone, pearl and metallic designs in colors harmonizing with the material of the suit. Large bound buttonholes or loops and buttons make a clever trim ming and are used to a considerab extent. Black and white stripes upon plainly-made skirt are most bewitching if arranged in such a manner as to give the impression of a corkscrew twirl: these spirals seem to turn from the waist downward at every move ment of the wearer.
