When the Chain Chafes.

By RUTH CAMERON.

A young couple came to the verge of serious trouble over a suffrage demonstration. She believed in suffrage and planned to take part in the demonstration. Furthermore, she wanted her husband to take part in it.

But her husband didn't believe in equal suffrage and was unwilling to. Furthermore he wanted her to give up her intended participation.

Whereupon she made it an issue. "If you really cared for me you'd be willing to do this." To which he responded, "If you really cared for me you'd be willing to give it up."

The result was an estrangement which came very near being serious. No, I'm not going to talk about the danger of dissension in the home which the question of suffrage produces. Not at all. I believe that people who would quarrel about that question would quarrel just as quickly about others if that were absent.

The reason I related that incident is because of the attitude of the mind it illustrates.

The point is this. Each wanted to curb the other's liberty of action. Neither was content to have liberty for himself and grant it to the other. Each wanted to forge chains out of love and bind his mate down.

Half the unhappiness in married life comes from just that attitude.

Love and freedom are two of the most beautiful things in the world. Can't we have them both? Must we make up our minds which we want most and give up the other?

Many married people seem to want to curtail not only the acts but even the thoughts and opinions of their mates.

To my mind, the right basis for a happy marriage is absolute liberty of thought and the greatest possible liberty of action consistent with a respect for the rights of the other party.

Live and let live.

Remember that chains chafe.

But, you say, suppose a husband or wife holds opinions which are absolutely incompatible with the other's ideas of right and honour, and which lead to actions which seriously offend the other party.

Ah, my friend, the time to discover things like that is before marriage not after. Two people who are going to make a compact to live together the rest of their lives should try to understand each other's fundamental principles before they make that compact.

They must remember that a man's or woman's principles are the sources of his or her actions and should refuse to mate with one whose principles are profoundly different from their own.

If we could have less complaisance and willingness to compromise before marriage, and more after we would have fewer divorcees.

War.

By GEORGE FITCH.
Author of "At Good Old S'wash."

War is an attempt on the part of one country to shoot justice and reason into another.

When the statesmen of two nations have exhausted every effort to agree with each other, the job is turned over to the boys and young men of these countries. After these brave youngsters have argued with each other for a few hours, using smokeless and magazine logic, they are a very sad sight.

Sometimes a hundred thousand young men are used in one of these arguments. The pity of it is they are not useful for anything else thereafter. A battle-field covered with the bodies of fifty thousand citizens is a great indictment of the common or loose-jawed variety of logic used in international diplomacy.

We are still using the brand of logic which was popular two thousand years ago, when the common citizen was of little value except as fertilizer. What we now need is an improved method of logic, which will enable two nations to discuss points of honor without creating standing room only in the orphan asylums.

Nothing can exceed the glory and grandeur of war in literature and history. But a young man who has been torn into twenty irregular fragments is not a grand and glorious thing. He represents the most shocking waste of the greatest natural resource.

There is nothing grander about war than there is about the box car which passes over the citizen who didn't hear the train coming. War is brutal, messy and unattractive. It is more extravagant than pestilence. We laugh at the old-fashioned nations which still thresh wheat by driving an ox over it. But when we desire to settle an obscure point of international diplomacy, we often do it by shooting holes into half a million young men, and spending enough money to pay old age pensions to the entire nation.

War is a big fool performance, because it is such a waste of perfectly good heroes, who are willing to go out and die in defense of a nation which could not be protected by a wornout and back-number system of argument.

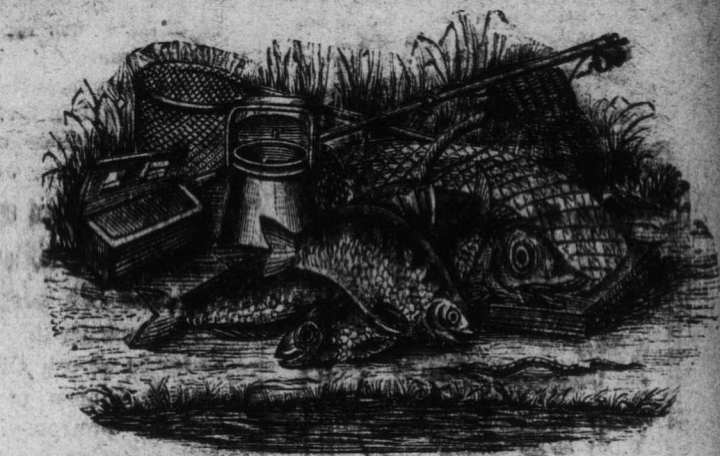

The Universities ought to invent some modern system of debate whereby two nations might discuss their affairs without calling in the coroner and the undertaker to take complete charge of the situation.

All nations admit that war is foolish. All we need is to have them admit it altogether in firm tones.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office—its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modern and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-VERMICKLE CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. Household Notes

If the zinc lining of the refrigerator looks battered it can be enamelled and made to look like new.

Fruit salads should replace heavy puddings and pies for desserts as soon as warm weather sets in.

Boil apples or potatoes fifteen minutes, then bake them. It takes much less time than the usual way.

If a room is filled with smoke, open windows and wave a towel wet in vinegar and hot water around in it. Potatoes, other vegetables and pork chops are among the edibles that may be cooked in the casserole to advantage.

Heat lemons before squeezing and you will get much more juice. Rolling before squeezing has somewhat the same effect.

Use ammonia water always instead of soap if you are cleaning white paint. It has the advantage of not dulling the surface.

Well-cooked rice and macaroni can well take the place of potatoes when the old ones are too expensive.

If you have a perfectly good garment with poor machine embroidery on it, you can work over the embroidery, using it as padding.

The medicine chest shouldn't be forgotten when the spring cleaning comes around. All empty and old bottles should be thrown away.

To make windows very clean wash with good scouring soap, rinse and rub with a flannel cloth wet with vinegar. Then polish with a dry cloth.

If you have good white silk gloves which have turned yellow, soak them in clear strong coffee and you will have a fresh-looking pair instead.

In working with raffia, especially it should be soaked and then rinsed in several waters to take the dressing out of it.

Spanish scrambled eggs are made with chopped peppers and an onion browned in butter, a cupful of tomato pulp added, and, lastly, the beaten, seasoned eggs.

A good dahlia support is five or six feet of wire fencing fastened together like a circle and set over the plants when small. Later they can be trained over it.

To remove oil stains from carpets make a paste with fuller's earth and cold water, and spread thickly on the soiled parts. Let it dry, then remove with a stiff brush.

To clean bedroom ware and marble-topped washstands rub well with a rag dipped in turpentine. This method is useful in a sick room where milk, medicine, etc., are apt to be spilled and require to be quickly removed.

Boots should never be allowed to go too far before they are repaired; often a few coppers spent in time will keep them in good condition. Heels should be kept straight, otherwise the boot loses shape and its wearer a good carriage.

To clean black marble clocks, wash marble with warm water, then apply with a piece of flannel a little boot polish. Rub lightly all over with a soft cloth, and the marble will look like new. The less polish used the better the result.

A Good Opportunity.

A delightful story is told of Dr. J. E. Watts-Ditchfield, the recently appointed Bishop of Chelmsford.

On one occasion he was very anxious to get a certain man, a shoemaker, to come to church, and he was arguing with him in the shop one day. The shoemaker met his arguments with the remark that he would not come to church to hear the Ten Commandments read out and have to make the responses, "for," said he, "the Ten Commandments were abolished long ago."

"To argue with such a man was useless," says Dr. Watts-Ditchfield, "but, acting on a sudden thought, I said, 'Oh, I am very glad to hear that the Eighth Commandment (thou shalt not steal) is abolished, for I am in need of a pair of shoes, and I think these are just my size!' And snatching up a pair of shoes as I spoke I tucked them under my arm and hurried out."

Needless to say, the shoemaker changed his mind about the Eighth Commandment and rushed out after the Bishop to rescue his property.

WARD'S LINIMENT LUMBERMAN'S FRIEND.

Last Week's Corns

Made these shoes impossible. But Inez told me of Blue-jay.

I applied it and the pain stopped in a moment. In 48 hours all three corns came out. No soreness whatever. I never thought of the corns from the moment I used Blue-jay. And now they are gone, to never return, unless tight shoes cause new ones.

This is the story of millions of corns which have been ended by Blue-jay. It will be the story of your corns when you use this one right method. Don't pare them. Paring never ends a corn. Use the modern method.

A famous chemist, by inventing Blue-jay, has made corn troubles needless. Blue-jay takes corns out, without any trouble, without any annoyance. Apply it in a jiffy, then forget the corn.

It is taking out about one million corns a month. It is the method now used and endorsed by physicians. You owe to yourself a test.
