Killed on the Track-Buried and Un known—The Body is Identified.

The Brantford Expositor says: "The particulars relating to the death of the late Joseph Eagleton, son of Mr. Henry Eagleton, are peculiarly painful. He had been at Detroit in search of work and did not find it. He returned to Canada and wrote home to his wife, who was in London. From there he went to Bike's Creek on July 21. He had gone to visit same people in a cottage by the railway side. The track at this place has a remarkably strong bend, besides being a grade. When young Eagleton came out of the cottage he was seen to walk up the track. Just as he got there the train came sweeping along at a terrific pace. He saw it just as it was upon him, and made a leap clear of the track. He got past the rails, but the buffer of the big mogul engine struck him in the back, and dashed him against the fence, killing him instantly.

There was nothing on the body to assist in identification. No coroner's inquest was held, strange to say, and no efforts to find deceased's friends. The people in the neighborhood buried him quietly and retained the clothes. The next day after the accident Mrs. Eagleton, jun., saw a four-line paragraph in the London papers about the unknown killed. Strange as it may appear, she had a strange feeling or premonition of her husband's death, and sent the paragraph on to Mr. Henry Eagleton here. He at first pooh-pooled the idea The young wife, however, was restless and unsatisfied, and writing the postmaster near where the accident occurred, the reply, though inaccurate in many respects, still further increased her suspicions until urther linquiry and the non-appearance of her husband of the shown who haid the remains away easily recognized. His clothing was then brought to Mr. Eagleton then left Brantford on Tuesday for the scene of the accident. He took a pleture of deceased with him, which those who haid the remains away easily recognized. His clothing was then brought to Mr. Eagleton, when all doubt as to the identity of the poor - Hickory, dickory, dock,

BY REEFS AND HILLS OF ICE.

Army has issued instructions for a great thanksgiving and harvest festival, to take place Sunday and Monday, Aug. 28 and 29, throughout the whole Dominion and Newfoundland.

—Through the kindness of the Trustee Board of Queen's Avenue Methodist Church, the collections next Sunday, morning and evening, will be devoted to the rebuilding fund for the Methodist Chluge of St. Johns, Nfild., destroyed by fire, As the cause is a worthy one, a liberal response is anticipated.

—The most important changes proposed in the Pharmacy Act and considered by the council in Toronto yesterday were: 1. Forbidding doctors to keep a drug store while practicing their profession. 2. Imposing tax or license fee of $100 on all itinerant venders of medicines and surgical appliances. 3. Providing for three council meetings yearly instead of two as now.

—It is gratifying to the managers of the Protestant Orphans' Home to find that not only do the kind citizens remember its interests while living, but by placing its name in their will confer a lasting benefit for its permanent good. The latest instance of this is the bequest of the latest for its permanent good. The latest instance of this is the bequest of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, which the trustees have decided to add to the endowment fund.
