Hostile Airship Could Destroy London By Fire

T. G. Tullock in the current issue of the Nineteenth Century deals with the Aerial Peril. He draws a lucid picture of London's unpreparedness in the face of the present and prospective progress in the science of aviation. "Consider the Thames," he says, "Hammersmith Bridge down below Gravesend," he writes, "every day within the space of about five miles lie, either in dock or stored in many thousand merchant vessels of every sort, size and description, ocean liners to 'dumb' barges, whilst the river's banks are honeycombed with wharves, docks, canals and basins, round which are grouped millions of pounds' worth of factories, warehouses, stores, gasworks, oil stores, etc.; and last, but not least there is Woolwich Arsenal, the Royal Gun and the factories and the Royal Laboratory, forming one of the chief sources of supply of warlike material for the Empire. The latter department alone is practically the only place in the United Kingdom where the cartridges for our navy are made up, without which our Dreadnoughts are useless. Hard by lies the Royal Torpedo factory, and not far off are the huge magazines containing hundreds of tons of cordite and other warlike explosives. And yet, with these millions of pounds' worth of civil property and vital supplies of warlike materials, all of which are singularly susceptible to destruction by fire, there is not one single fort or defensive work from London to Gravesend except the solitary antiquated Tilbury fort, of revered Elizabethan memory. The supposition is, of course, that the forts at Sheerness and in the vicinity thereto would suffice to keep an enemy's marine fleet out of the Thames. But suppose they came via the air in their aerial machines, what then? This whole fifty miles of concentrated essence of Empire lies at the absolute mercy of even a single airship of aerial machine which would plant a dozen incendiary missiles in certain pre-selected spots. I shall not mention such spots but I would guarantee that given a certain wind and certain incendiary missiles, I could undertake to have the whole riverside, including ships, wharves, warehouses, and the arsenal in a blaze in a very short time.

"Once a certain number of incendiary centres were aligned about the same time, not all the powers of the London fire brigade, nor any number of fire brigades, could deal with such a conflagration, and with an easterly wind (which is just the most favorable for an attack by airships coming from certain parts of the continent) and a rising tide, the smoke and sparks and burning ships carried up the Thames would soon render the principal portion of London untenable and eventually engulf it in the general holocaust.

"Any one who has been to a fairly big fire well knows how practically the whole of the available strength of the fire brigade is sometimes concentrated on one pile of building alone in an attempt to isolate the fire. What would be the result if say even only a dozen fires were well started up, wind at spots which had been specially selected from a previous knowledge of their susceptibility to combustion, their effect on the subsequent spread of the fire, and by reason of their position being such as to hamper the concentration of fire brigades whether afloat or ashore? "Suppose, for the sake of example there existed, on the banks of the lower Thames, stores containing many hundreds of thousands of gallons of oil, and that an airship carrying a small well-armed crew descended upon this store in the early hours of the morning, blew holes in the huge oil-containers, which stand up, usually well above the ground. Like gas-holders, thus allowing the contents to flow into the Thames. A single match does the rest, and there we have, with a rising tide, a river of flame from bank to bank (oil spreads very quickly and burns) floating on top of water, surging up through the commercial heart of London, devouring everything that comes in its path, ships, wharves, warehouses, stores, etc. In a few hours the most important part of London is a furnace. Of what avail then, even at the start, would be the fire brigade? Nothing could stop such a fire, all caused by a party of fearless, resolute men with the help of an airship and one match. The brain reels at the thought of the awful destruction which could thus simply be brought about. There are many other ways of attaining the same object which the reader can himself suggest, all rendered easy by aerial machines.

"Think of the loss of human lives, apart from the ruin of our commerce, which would ensue. It is difficult enough even now to get away from

London during a holiday time when there are crowds at a station; but try to imagine London ablaze and everyone trying to escape. "It is needless further to press the point I wish to make by piling up horrors. This point is that by destroying the heart the other members will cease to function, for it is inconceivable that, with such a chaotic state as would follow the destruction of London, any coherent direction of affairs, either official or commercial, could continue. The seat of Government might doubtless be removed to another town, but with the destruction of the London Banks and of all postal and telegraphic communication it would be impossible to carry on. Even suppose the seat of government removed to another town, a similar state of affairs might be brought about there by a few bold aeronauts. It is quite possible to paralyze this country by other means than by causing a fire of London; but I do not propose to 'give the show away' by saying how it can be done. I have no hesitation in stating that it would be quite possible by secondary means to render both the navy and army powerless in a very short space of time with half a dozen airships acting under a certain plan. I am not romancing, and I make the above statement in all seriousness."

GRATEFUL FOR ECZEMA CURE

Any Sufferer Can Write to Mr. D. D. D. McGillivray of Nanton, Alta., for Full Information. There are undoubtedly many frauds in the testimonials of medical firms—letters written by friends or even employees of the advertiser. But, on the other hand, in some cases the testimonials are thoroughly genuine, gladly offered by prominent citizens, who are grateful for the cure.

Such a case is that of Mrs. D. D. McGillivray of Nanton, Alberta, who cured her two children with D. D. D. and is glad to tell others about it. She wrote on September 3rd last: "Your letter to hand of recent date, I must thank you for so kindly inquiring about my order and also the child. I am glad to say I received the three one dollar bottles of D. D. D. and two cakes of Soap safely, and am delighted with the result of both prescription and Soap. The Soap is all that is required to complete the treatment. The little boy of two years and a half is to all appearance cured of the dreadful Eczema.

"My baby girl at two months broke out with the same rash and I treated her with D. D. D. and am perfectly satisfied she is cured to our great joy. I feel sure it is a splendid remedy for all skin diseases and can highly recommend it. I will be glad to recommend it to any one suffering with skin trouble." If any reader of this paper should write Mrs. McGillivray, we request that a self-addressed stamped envelope be enclosed. For free sample bottle of D. D. D. Prescription write to the D. D. D. Laboratory, Department B. M., 23 Jordan St., Toronto. For sale by all druggists.

THEOLOGY IN THE HIGHLANDS.

The minister's class at the kirk of Tobermory had been reading the story of Joseph and his brethren, and it came to the turn of the minister to examine the boys. The replies to all his questions had been quick, intelligent and correct. Such as: "What great crime did these sons of Jacob commit?" "They sold their brother Joseph." "Quite correct. And for how much?" "Twenty pieces of silver." "And what added to the cruelty and wickedness of these bad robbers?" A pause. "What made their treachery even more detestable and heinous?" Then a bright little Highlander stretched out an eager hand. "Well, my man?" "Please, sir, they sell't him over-cheap."

GUYSBORO COUNTY SWEEP BY FOREST FIRES.

Halifax, N. S., June 10.—Destructive forest fires are devastating Eastern Guysboro in this province. The drought of the past three weeks has made the forest as dry as tinder, and within the last two days fires started in six different places within sight of Guysboro town. Driven by a high wind, the fires spread rapidly, and large belts of valuable timber have been wiped out. Along the south shore of Chedabucto Bay over three miles of telegraph and telephone poles have been burned down at a heavy loss to the companies involved.

A Great Congress of Women in Montreal

Montreal, June 12.—Montreal is entertaining today more distinguished women than have ever before assembled in Canada. Nearly all the nations of the earth are represented and in each case the delegates are those who are leaders in Christian, philanthropic or educational work. Their primary aim is one, notwithstanding difference of race, creed or language, the improvement of conditions under which women live and work throughout the world. Delegates from Great Britain and Ireland, the European countries, and from the United States are here. Most of them arrived from Quebec last night, and for an hour Bonaventure station was the centre of one of the busiest scenes of a busy season. Guests were being introduced to their hostesses, and hostesses were showing the visitors what a Canadian welcome really means. It was midnight before the travellers and their baggage all left the station, and this morning an early start was made for a full day's work with some recreation by the way.

The Royal Victoria College is headquarters for the delegates. A large number of them are staying there, and the early morning hours were devoted to registering and meeting the members of the local executive, whose plans in the matter of arrangements have been so admirably and thoroughly carried out. The committee had secured a supply of the 'Women's Edition of The Witness,' and the visitors had an opportunity to see what the literary women of Montreal can do.

Then at half-past ten came the first meeting of the international executive at which Lady Aberdeen presided, the delegates who were not on the executive spending the morning in shopping and sightseeing. At one o'clock came the luncheon given by the Local Council of Women at the Place Viger Hotel. The tables were arranged on the large balconies overlooking the beautiful square, in all the glory of its early summer dress. The decorations consisted of flags of all nations, with the coat-of-arms of the City of Montreal occupying a prominent place. The table decorations, as a delicate compliment to Lady Aberdeen, consisted of Killarney roses.

The guests at the table of honor were: The Countess of Aberdeen, president of the International Council of Women; Lady Evelyn Grey, Mrs. Ogilvie Gordon, honorary secretary of the International Council of Women; Mrs. Sanford, honorary treasurer of the International Council of Women; Mrs. Sewall, past president International Council of Women; Mrs. Willoughby Cummings, corresponding secretary of the National Council of Women of Canada; Mrs. Mackintosh, honorary recording secretary of the National Council of Women of Canada; Mrs. Dandurand, provincial president (Quebec), Miss Carmichael, provincial president (Nova Scotia); Mrs. Bailey, patron of the International Council of Women; Mrs. Osborne, patron of the International Council of Women; Mrs. E. UNPOISED LIVES.

The life of the criminal is simply an unpoised life. If a person were perfectly poised, wrongdoing would be so repugnant that it would be unthinkable. It is the one-sided, the unpoised mind, that goes wrong. It is just as normal for the balanced mind to choose the right, the good, as for the magnet to draw to itself whatever is kindred. Just as the needle in the mariner's compass always points to the north star, no matter how thick the fog or how the tempest rages, there is a needle within every human heart always points to the north star of rectitude, of right, of truth, no matter what storms of discord, of weakness or of crime may be raging in the individual mind. Nothing can prevent this little indicator from pointing to the right, no matter how far the individual may drift from it, how low he may sink in vicious living.
