

QUEEN'S VS. OTTAWA COLLEGE.

AT OTTAWA.

E.L., eh, Joe? Hurt y'rself? Well, never mind, I'll tell you all 'bout it till you get well 'nuff to climb up again.

There's a orful crowd there a'ready; guess they'll start soon. Yes, there goes them strange fellers in striped yeller and black. Gosh! They're big'uns! "Main strenth an' orkardness" I guess is their great pint! There's the College boys now; jist hear that shoutin'! Hooray!

While the young sport in the tree was explaining to his friends below that the Ottawa College would play against the wind, the teams took their respective positions as represented below:—

As the team's lined up it was apparent that Queen's players were by far the heavier men, but Ottawa College sympathisers felt that victory depends more on intelligent playing than on "main strength and awkwardness." The ball was kicked off and play commenced—A splendid rush and it was within Queen's 25 yard line. The first scrimmage of the day then commenced—Therein the strength of the visitors told against the College boys. The ball freeing itself was gradually forced by Queen's past centre-field in dangerous closeness to Varsity goal line. Cormier was on hand and with the ball clasped tightly under his arm dashed forward, passed his opponent's rush line, and was stopped only when a short distance remained between him and a touch-down—A scrimmage followed the ball was
