White May Indicate Government's Position in Budget Speech Monday.

19 4 9 5 OTTAWA, March 23 .- The impression gains ground that the government has about decided upon its course in the matter of the Canadian Northern bond guarantees, and that some announcement may be expected in the near future. Sir William Mackenzie had a conference with the prime minister and Hon. J. D. Reid, acting minister of railways and canals, at which it is said R. B. Bennett, M.P. for Calgary, who has been the leader of the anti-Mackenzie and Mann sentiment, COOPER-Suddenly, on Monday mornwas present. It is quite likely that the position of the government will be indicated and its policy to some extent foreshadowed by Hon, Mr. White in his budget speech on Mon-

Must Shoulder Responsibility. Among Conservative members the expression is general that the Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk Pa-cific are legacies from the old government, but that the responsibility is with the present government to deal with the situation boldly, and for the best interests of the country, without regard to partisan considerations. Some of them say that any further states to the Canadian Northern will be to explain the present government to deal will be unpopular and hard to explain to the ordinary voter, but that the party will have to get behind the government in dealing with the problem

At the third court of the season at Buckingham Palace on Friday evening. Queen Mary wore a splendid gown of opalescent brocade and jewelled em-broidery. Her crown of diamonds corresponded with her high diamond collar and necklace, and she wore also collar and necklace, and she wore also the ribbon of the Garter. The most notable presentation was that of Mrs. John Freeman Milford, formerly Fraulein von Friedlander Fuld, the German heiress, whose marriage to Lord Redesdale's son was one of the events of the last Berlin season. She was presented by her mother-in-law. The young bride wore the wonderful wedding gown which excited such admiration in Berlin, and her jewels, especially her tlara, were of regal magnificence.
