

- status of the neutral trader, 92 ;
on conditional contraband, 114-15 ; on the confiscation of contraband, 223 ; on liability of vessel and non-contraband part of cargo, 236.
- Calvo on the practice of breaking bulk, 210.
- Canon law, provisions of, 25-6 ;
extent of trade prohibitions, 26 ; their legal character, 27 ;
their influence on modern international law, 27-8.
- Captor's expenses, payment of by neutral carrier, 238, 249.
- Capture of enemy goods, 3, 7.
- Charles I's proclamation of Dec.
31, 1625, 51, 52, 108, 192 ; and of March 4, 1627, 108, 109, 233, 251.
- Charters of privileges granted to foreign merchants, 31.
- China, attitude of towards contraband trade of subjects, 71.
- Chino-Japanese war, 74, 132, 159.
- Civil law, provisions of, 23 ; their legal character, 24 ; and influence on modern international law, 24.
- Coal, British prohibition of supply of to French fleet in 1870, 2, 65.
- Commercial adventure, carriage of contraband considered as a, 90.
- Compensation for wrongful seizure, 218 ; under British prize court rules, 219.
- Conditional contraband, distinguished from absolute, 96-7, 123, 135, 165 ; consignment of to the enemy government, 97 ; German practice, 99, 100, 185 ; decisions of United States prize courts, 122-3 ; modern British doctrine, 123 ; continental practice, 124-6, 131 ; opinions of continental jurists, 126-8 ; abolition of discussed at the Hague and London, 104, 166 ; destination of under Declaration of London, 170 ; and in war of 1914-15, 98, 183, 185.
- Conflicting interests of belligerents and neutrals, 42, 44.
- Consolato del Mare, 32.
- Consular certificates, 205.
- Continuous voyage, doctrine of not required for contraband by conditions of transport during Napoleonic wars, 143-4 ; applied in case of carriage of dispatches, 145 ; and to prevent evasion of the rule of the war of 1756, 147 ; employment of more than one ship, 148 ; at what part of voyage capture may take place, 148-9 ; application of doctrine to contraband by France in 1855, 151 ; and by the United States during the American civil war, 151-3 ; British attitude, 154-5 ; necessity for doctrine under modern conditions, 156 ; later practice of nineteenth century, 157 ; discussion of doctrine at Institute of International Law, 157-8 ; applied by Italy in 1896, 159 ; and maintained by Great Britain during the Boer war, 160 ; attitude of the Powers at the London Conference, 162 ; rules of the Declaration of London, 168, 172 ; practice in the war of 1914-15, 183-4.
- Contraband, antiquity of notion of, 20.
- Contracts relating to contraband, enforcement of, 81.
- Contrebande par accident, 9.
- Conversion of merchant ships into men-of-war, 193.
- Convoy, origin of doctrine in seventeenth century, 195 ; capture of Swedish convoy in 1798, 196 ; dispute with Denmark in 1800, 199 ; Anglo-Russian treaty of 1801, 199 ; practice of nineteenth century, 200 ; discussion at Institute of International Law, 200 ; provisions of Declaration of London, 204.
- Crimean war, 77, 200.
- Criteria of enemy or neutral character, 6.
- Crusades, contraband during the 24-6.
- Customary law of contraband, establishment of, 41.