denyed him, but upon the second intreatic was admitted to enter the Ship, and to parley. The Spaniffs Generall began to demand, if there were Warres betwixt England and Spaine; who was answered, that his arrogant manner of proceeding, viurping the Queene his Mistresses right, as much as in him lay, had given sufficient cause for breach of the Peace; And that he purposed presently, to give notice thereof to the Queene, and her Counsell; and in the meane time, that he might depart. Wherevnto the Spanish Generall replyed, that he knew not any offence he had committed, and that he would be glad to know, wherein he had mif-behaved himselfe. My Father seeing he pretended to escape by ignorance, beganne to put him in mind of the custome of Spaine and Fraunce, and many other parts, and that he could by no meanes be ignorant of that, which was common Right to all Princes in their Kingdomes; Demanding, if a Fleete of England should come into any Port of Spaine (the Kings Maiesties Ships being present) if the English should carry their Flags in the toppe, whether the Spanish would not shoot them downe; and if they persevered, if they would not beate them out of their Port. The Spanish Generall confesfed his fault, pleaded ignorance, not malice, and submitted himselfe to the penaltie my Father would impose: but intreated, that their Princes (through them) might not come to have any jarre. My Father a while (as though offended) made himselfe hard to be intreated, but in the end, all was shut vp, by his acknowledgement, and the auncient amitie renewed, by feasting each other abourd and ashore.

As also in her repassage. The selfe same Fleete at their returns from Flaunders, meeting with her Maiesties Shippes in the Channell, though sent to accompany the aforesaid Queene, was constrained during the time that they were with the English, to vayle their Flagges, and to acknowledge that which all must doe that passe through the English Seas.

Butto our Voyage.
