The screen drame has indeed reached a very high standard when such an appealing story as "Felix O'Day", presented yesterday at Shea's Hippodrome makes the audience almost believe it is a spoken and not a silent drama. H. B. Warner, ever a favorite with the moving picture public, is the stan and greatily assists in making F. H. Smith's story one of great human literest. The vaudeville part of the bill is particularly strong this week. The Philmers are very elever wire performers and neat and juck in all their actions. Ripard & Ogoody make much fun as eccentric coinedians. Percival & Lizette are elever in "Just for Phun," whilst Van & Carrie Avery cause much wonder by this performance. Lowry & Prince as a boy and girl, and Dolee Sisters & Company in de luxe harmony, complete a splendid program—one of the best for splendid program and splendid program—one of the p leads her. After the death of her husband while saving the lives of his fellow-workmen in a subway tunnel, she finally reaches a stage where a sudden taking off is the great healer of all ills. Creatore himself was at the baton, but he was perhaps better supported by the prima donna and the company than by the musicians, there being the solution who were present passed a resolution endorsing him as the soldier candidate. Mr. Higgins stated briefly that he didentified with such measures as those extending educational opportunities for the young, providing for unemployment insurance for the workingman, or furthering in any way the policy of public by the prima donna and the company than by the musicians, there being than by the musicians, there being only 18 pieces in the orchestra. The opera was presented with due regard for the scenes of the time it was supposed to represent, the dynasty of the charaohs, and the costumes were in keeping with the general ensemble. Agnes Robinson, the prima doma, was unusually well supported by many who took their respective parts with both grace and verve, and the choruses of slaves and priests were no less notable in their interpretation of the varied parts. The scenic effects were in keeping with the oostumes which took the audience back into vistas of the past, little known to lay. Dramatic at many points, the interpretation of the opera by this company never descended to the level of the melodramatic, and dramatic restraint combined with fiery declarmatics in giving a high total to a motion and supposed by the branch advocating one night per month to be held as a meeting open to all veterans, irrespective of their affiliations, and to be devoted to their affiliations, and to be held as a meeting open to all veterans, irrespective of their affiliations, and to be devoted to their affiliations, and to be elevated to their affiliations, and to be devoted to their affiliations,
