

THE RUSSIAN SABLE

THE RICHEST and most expensive of all fur is that of the Russian Sable. In size the little animal is about the same as the American marten, but the overhair is much more fine and flowing, of a rich, dark shade and of from 11 to 21 ins. The pelt is very soft, tough and durable. The Russian Sable is hunted in mid-winter, the best species being found in Yakutsk, Siberia, the next from the Lena River and the poorest from the lower Amoor. The successful hunter of the highest grade Russian Sable makesa comtortable income, one pelt alone being worth anvwhere from $100 to $250. An ordinarv small Russian Sable set of a scarf

(taking two skins) witha another 7 muff(using two skins). is therefore a luxurious garment, which only the very wealthy can afford. In our showrooms we have on sale some of these beautiful garments. Every skin was selected by our special agents and was carefully tailored into garments in our fac-

*The Factory Girl."—Majestic.

Large and appreciative audiences greeted "The Factory Girl" yesterday at both performances. The play depicts the life of the modern working girl and the trials and temptations that beset her. The plot is woven around a young girl who is in love with a son of the proprietor. Thru one of the clerks three pay envelopes are concealed in her pocket, but before the police arrive Charley Wile, an insurance agent, who creates great mirth hunting for victims, removes them. The fourth act is a clever production of stage mechanism, showing the whole plant of the firm of Hartman & Son in operation. Specialties are introduced by Guy Rawson and Bertha Monill, which were well received. Miss ably supported by Edwin De Coursey.

At Shea's.

At Shea's Theatre, Byron Douglas & Co, lead the amusement with a one-act comedy, "The Cowboy and the Lord," wherein the swish of the lariat, the bang of the revolver and continual fun are the component parts. In the sketch, Lord Tommy and Billy the Buck are suitors for the hand of Dolly, the pretty daughter of a wealthy Chicago pork-packer. Billy is the pork-packer's nephew, and has a strong hold on the pork-sticker's affections, as well as the daughter's. Billy is about to visit Chicago. The lord is meeting with poor success with his lady love. The birds are fed in a special manner peculiar to each owner, the secret of which is jealously guarded. A mixture of finely chopped beef and barley centers into the composition of the food.

Phosphate in various forms is also given with the food.

For the three weeks prior to the competition the food is carefully dosed and made as stimulating and exciting as possible. The bird is then sent to the show. During the crowing contest a timekeeper with a chronometer stands in front of each bird and marks the number of crows and the variation of notes in a given time, generally 15 minutes.
