The homework system in New York city means largely the employment of Italian children in the home. Until the system is abolished, there is little hope that these small Italian children will be released from their bondage. For thirty-four years the state has been trying to regulate the system, by forbidding the manufacture of certain articles for the manufacture of certain articles for the protection of public health. Children in protection of public health. Children in the tenements used to shell nuts, sometimes helping the work along by cracking an obstinate one with their teeth. Articles of food, dolls, children's and infants' clothing are no longer allowed to be handled in the tenements because sometimes they were found in homes where there was sickness. The dangers to public health convinced the legislators that such work must be stopped.

As no one, however, has yet proved to the legislature any relation between public health and artificial flowers, passementeric and such articles, Italian children by the hundreds are allowed to work at any age any number of hours work at any age any number of hours in their homes, making these things. Forbidding children to help their parents at this work in their homes is of no avail, as a man's home is his castle and inspection is almost impossible.

Perhaps some day a Solomon may appear who can explain and convince that until all tenement manufacture is for-bidden, the child laborers will be with

THE CORN MARKET.

Chicago, Oct. 1—Frost in parts of Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, and Indiana, brought about higher prices today in the corn market. Wide differences between the value of live stock and of corn tended also to strengthen corn. On the other the value of live stock and of corn tended also to strengthen corn. On the other hand, doubt as to whether any severe damage had been done by frost acted as a check on buying.

Opening prices, which ranged from 1-8 to 1-4 cents up at $1.19 to $1.198-7 December, and $1.161-8 to $1.161-4 May, were followed by a moderate reaction.
