$104,000 WORTH OF PUMP WATER.

An Old Milk Dealer's Justification for Adulterating His Wares.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—A report of a rather startling nature is about to be issued by the Department of Agriculture on the adulteration of coffee and tea. The former appears now to be chiefly sophisticated by the substitution for the real beans of artificial ones moulded from compositions made of clay, condensed milk and other materials. Secretary Rusk will urge the importance of excluding these and other imitations from importation to this country by the passage of a law shutting out articles palpably intended for the falsification of food. The beans are manufactured by wholesale in Germany and sold here for 10 cents a pound. From Utrecht, also, are now coming large quantities of artificial almonds, made from glucose paste. They are all shaped and colored by machines, being finally steeped in nitro-benzole to give the necessary odor. The deception is so perfect that when mixed with the real article, the counterfeits are scarcely to be discovered. Of course they are ready shelled.

There are many factories in the United States, particularly in Connecticut, which are wholly engaged in the production of adulterants for sale to various trades, such as ground cocoanut shells for mixing with pepper. It is estimated that there is hardly any pepper on the market at present which is not at least three-fourths something else. The manufacture of such articles intended for the express purpose of swindling consumers, often to the injury of their health, is unrestrained by any legal enactment. In fact, the sophistication of food has come to be regarded a part of legitimate business.

To illustrate this, take the instance of a retired Washington milk dealer who as witness in the case of a disputed contract for milk, which was alleged to have been watered. He testified that a quart of water in two gallons of milk was fair business, and it was upon this statement that the lawyer on the other side cross-examined him.

"How long were you engaged in the milk business?" was the first question.

"Thirty-eight years," the witness replied.

"During that period how many quarts have you delivered daily on an aveage.

"Well from first to last, say 1,000 quarts."

"And how much were you paid per quart?"

"Oh, from 6 to 7 cents."

"Call it six cents. In 1,000 quarts there were according to your measurement, 125 quarts of water. So you sold $7.50 worth of water every day. That was clear profit, of course, inasmuch as the material cost you nothing?"

"I suppose so," admitted the old dealer.

"As you say," the lawyer continued, you sold an average of 1,000 quarts every day, including Sundays. In 365 days therefore, you must have disposed of 45,625 quarts of water at six cents a quart, representing a net gain of $2,737,-50 annualy on a fluid which you drew from the pump?"

"I'm not much on figures," responded the old dealer with reluctance, "but I suppose that's correct."

"You were in business for thirty-eight years, you say. At the rate of $2,737.50 annually, you must have gained in that time by the sale of water $104,000 approximately. That is correct, is it not?"

"I suppose it is."

"Ahem! You are accounted a wealthy man, I understand. In what shape, may I ask, are your means invested?"

"A block of houses on U street is the only property I own."

"The block is worth $100,000, is it not?"

"Just about that, I believe."

"So it appears," said the lawyer, "that this block of houses which you own has been paid for entirely by the sale of water from the pump?"

"Certainly," replied the retired milk dealer. "But you will observe that if I had not put the quart of water in each two gallons of milk, I should at present not only possess no block of houses, but I should be $4,000 worse off than nothing. So you will now understand my meaning when I stated just now that such a proportion of adulteration was a fair business, for no man can reasonably be satisfied to work thirty-eight years at a trade, and find himself at the end of the time a pauper and in debt."

THE PEARL-DIVER'S FOE.

A Giant Bivalve with Yawning Shells Lies in Wait for Him.

"Your wealthy ladies of Chicago who assemble at evening parties and soirees in magnificent costumes covered with fine pearls know little or absolutely nothing, perhaps, about the many dangers encountered in gathering those pearls from the sea," remarked J. G. Danvers, of London, England, at the Tremont House. "I was on a trip along the coast of Zanzibar, Africa, a year ago, when I learned that sea-pearl fishing is not a trade for men of weak hearts to follow. The pearls are gathered at the bottom of the sea by divers. The reason a man with a weak heart is not fit for the work is because the stopped breath and the pressure of ninety feet of sea water, with its weight of sixty-two pounds to the cubic foot, will bring on palpitation of the heart and burst the weaker vessels, causing distressing and often dangerous hemorrhages. But the divers are all stalwart savages, in such rugged health that the physical danger never occurs to them. Two dangers constantly menace the diver. Wherever the oyster grows there also thrives the giant tridachna, a monstrous bivalve, whose shell is from four to six feet in length, firmly anchored to the bottom. It lies with its scalloped shells yawning a foot apart. Immediately anything touches it, the shells snap together, and once these large shells are closed not a dozen men out of water could get them apart, far less the single diver, fifteen fathoms deep, who may have dropped into the capacious mouth or have carelessly put his hand within its shell while groping in the gloom.

"If such a fate befall a diver there is only one thing for him to do, and that is to amputate himself from the enormous mollusk and rise to the surface, fainting, bloody and mangled. Those savages will fight anything from a lion to a python on land, but they haven't the courage to run against a bivalv under ninety feet of water and stand the chance of those yawning shells closing in on an arm or a leg and crushing the bones to splinters. If the monstrous mullusk should close down and catch the diver's head of course he would never know what killed him. His head would be mashed to a pulp and it would go off as if severed by a guillotine. I saw only one native who had been caught by one of these mollusks. It had closed down on his left hand, and the only thing he could do as the monster held him in its grip, was to cut off his left arm at the elbow joint."

SALTON LAKE.

It Bids Fair to Become a Sea 150 Miles Long and 300 Feet Deep.

P. G. Cotter of Yuma, in conversation to the present condition of the Salton sea, he said it is estimated that nine-tenths of the Colorado River is flowing into it. The sea is not increased in depth by this inflow, but it has lowered about three inches. It is now from four to seven feet in depth in various parts. The river leaves its bed about fourteen miles below Yuma, where the elevation above the sea level is 143 feet. It flows in precipitous plunges, many of them in the nature of cataracts, down dozens of feet, wearing away the soil over which it flows, and making the fall constantly more precipitous near the break. The break is 137 feet above the sea, while the Salton basin is 263 feet below, making a total grade from the river of 400 feet.

The Colorado River is very heavily charged with solids, and will precipitate half an inch of alluvium to every six feet of water. This matter is being constantly washed down the river, and is forming a bank in the river bed just beyond this break, so that shortly the entire body of the river will be turned into the Salton sea. The winter floods, he thinks, will raise the Salton sea until it becomes a lake 300 feet in depth and 150 miles long, and finds its outlet through the bed of the New River into the Gulf of Mexico. Southern Pacific engineers have examined the river break with a view of finding a way to turn the river back. They reported that such could be done by piling, but that would be too expensive a job for the company to undertake. The cause of this break is explained in this manner.

The Colorado River flows as far as a point a few miles above Yuma directly south. At Yuma it meets the Yuma River and turns to the west nearly at right angles. There it struck a small mountain called Pilot Knob, and it changed again back to a south course. Recently, instead of flowing at an acute angle at Pilot Knob, the river has been making from Yuma a due south course, the bed not reaching Pilot Knob at all. This threw the force of the stream against the west bank of the river, which soon ate that bank away and formed the break. The break would not have occurred had not the river left its bed near Pilot Knob. Dr. Cotter says the people of Yuma are glad of the change. The new sea will be a benefit to the climate as well as provide them with a new method of transportation, since vessels could come into the sea from the Gulf of California.

EACH CHIP WAS $1,000.

Stiff Play at the Most Famous Gambling House in Nevada.

The most famous gambling house in Nevada in the old days was operated by Gentry & Crittenden. The house had a line of credit of a quarter of a million in San Francisco. This firm every month set aside $3,000 for table expenses alone, for wine flowed as freely as spring water at Saratoga.

A bettor did not ask if there was a limit to the game. A sport who had sand and cash enough might bet $50,000 on a single card. The bank's backers counted their millions as Eastern gamesters counted their thousands. In October, 1863, a burly ranchman, John Timberlake, worth a million, came up from New Mexico. He was known as a millionaire in good standing with the San Francisco banks and bankers, and his telegram was good with Mackay, Flood & O'Brien for $500,000. The old ranchman with his corduroy trousers tucked in his boots and smoking stogy cigars, was a welcome guest anywhere in Nevada. He chatted an hour with Gov. Nye, and after getting two bottles of Pommery Sec inside of him he sauntered into the faro room.

"Give me a stack of thousand-dollar fish" (chips), said Timberlake.

"Certainly, all you want," replied the suave Crittenden, a nephew of the Kentucky United States Senator of that name.

One thousand went on the jack and was lost. Timberlake lost $10,000 without winning a bet. He swore and got outside another bottle of Sec. Luck changed, and at 1 a. m. the old cattleman was $50,000 ahead of the game. Flushed with victory, Timberlake ordered a case of wine for the house. But the genius of faro is fickle. The old man made a call with a $1,000 bill and picked up $5,000. Luck failed him from that moment. At break of day the burly ranchman, without handing in a dollar, had blown in just $41,000. He was cross as a bear with a sore head, but tried to smile. "One thousand on the ace." It lost. Old Timberlake rose and said slowly, as if each word weighed a pound: Crittenden, I reckon I've had fun enough for this one jamboree, and ordering a basket of wine for the house he seated himself at Gentry's ebony desk, and cool as a cucumber, drew a check on Mackay's bank for $24,000. When the wine was opened the dealer in a soft voice, said: This game is now closed."

UNHEALTHY WEATHER!

Thousands Crying Out With Rheumatism!

WET AND COLD AGGRAVATE SICKNESS AND DISEASE!

The Safe Course to Pursue!

The autumn season, with its spells of cold and wet, is to many a time of agony and suffering. The doctors everywhere are looking after the rheumatic, and, as far as cure is concerned, are meeting with small success. At this particular time, the men and women who are the victims of rheumatism are to be pitied. They dare not venture out unless the weather is fine. They shudder with fear when the icy winds blow and the cold rains pour down. They dread wet and cold limbs, and are continually in fear of increased sufferings. These sufferers should bear in mind that this dreadful malady often attacks the vital organs, and it is a well known fact that deaths from this disease are more numerous in the autumn than any other season. For all such sufferers there is a comforting assurance that Paine's Celery Compound is a complete eradicator of this painful and dangerous disease. No other known remedy has ever accomplished such wonderful results amongst our Canadian people. The prescriptions of doctors have failed in nearly every case, while Paine's Celery Compound has been triumphant. We kindly advise every reader, who is a martyr to rheumatism, to procure a bottle of this wonderful preparation and give it a trial.

The Aroostook Times editor reflects that those lucky mortals in the southern hemisphere are just getting ready for summer. But why any luckier than the Aroostook mortals who, with full bins, granaries and pocketbooks, as the result of a good crop season, with excellent prospects of soon being connected with the rest of the world by a railroad line, and other causes for rejoicing, are now fortifying themselves for the long, cold, but far from unenjoyable winter?

"Give me Lessive Phenix," says the housewife. And if the grocer should say: "Mrs. Shrewd, we're out of that now, but wouldn't an ordinary washing soda do?" That lady would promptly reply—"No, it will not do. I suffered enough with burnt and puckered hands and yellow clothes while I used the old chemicals. I know what Lessive Phenix is; I have tested it both upon clothes, and silverware, and about everything in the house; and it is just marvellous. No old common powders for me any more. I save in time, labor and soap with Lessive Phenix, and then I have lovely white clothes."

Evangelism and Moustaches.

It came near being a rule of the Evangelical Association yesterday that moustaches must go. The Rev. M. Pfitzinger introduced a resolution to the effect that the ministers of the Evangelical Association should not wear the fashionable moustache. His resolution, offered in a facetious way, was put to a vote and came within a few votes of passing.

Bishop Esher favored the motion of Mr. Pfitzinger and said that if moustaches were worn at all they should be kept short especially for the receiving of the holy sacrament.

Alfred A. Taylor of Margaree Harbor says:—"One bottle of MINARD'S LINIMENT cured a swelling of the gamble joint and saved a horse worth $140.

Thos. W. Payne, of Bathurst, saved the life of a valuable horse that the "Vet." had given up, with a few bottles of MINARD'S LINIMENT.

The Belfast Age maintains its reputation for yarns of large dimensions by this one in its current issue: Bangor and Machias are fighting as to which of the two places has got the smartest horse jockey, each claiming the smartest one in the state. The champion horse jockey, however, belongs in Belfast in the person of "Lije" Walker. Jnst to give his boy an idea how to get along in the world "Lije" started away from home one day on foot and nothing in his pockets but a jack knife. He was absent just one week and returned driving a pair of horses harnessed into a top buggy. Hitched to the rear axle was another horse and a cow, while ahead was a dog. "See how your pap does it," said Lije to his son as he gazed at the time of day from a handsome watch. For a fact he had got the whole turnout for his jack-knife and swapping the proceeds into one thing and another.
