To take a prisoner from the dock and give him a job on the police department was the extraordinary proposal made to Chief Vincent by Magistrate Elliott at Sault Ste. Marie recently, when Paddy O'Neil, former guardsman from the British army, who had seen service in South Africa, faced the bench on a charge of having crossed the International Bailway bridge into Canada, contrary to the immigration act.

bridge into Canada, contrary to the immigration act.

When Paddy entered court he brough this heels together with military precision, though with a most natural six, and stood to attention.

It transpired that the reason for crossing the bridge at midnight was none other than that he could get across for nothing.

The offence is a serious one from a immigration of the country of The offence is a serious one from an immigration stundpoint.

Paddy was broke, but his apparent respectability and smartness caused the bench to say, "You would make a good policeman. Can you give him a lob chief?"

"Not at present," he replied.

"Not even special service at higher said the bench. As the negative was given the megistrate told Paddy to get a job in the edit and as soon as there was a vacancy he would be appointed.

Rev. John Mewell the farous Scotsh Presvyterian presents, who reently took the pastorate of Cooke's Church, Toronto, it she subject of many stories which serve to show his wit and his ready resource in repartee. His friends say that he was never stumped while making a public address, and they tall of an occasion when Mr. McNeill was holding revival services in Cardid, Wales. A young man, thinking to perplex the preacher, sent a note up to the pistform with the request that the following er, ent a note up to the platform with the request that the following question be publicly answered:
"Dear Mr. McNelll, if you are seeking to enlighten roung men, kindly tell me who was Cain's wife."

The great prescher read the note and, while the audience hung breathlessly on his words, answered slowly and emphatically:
"I love young men—inquirers for truth especially—and should like to give this young man a word of advice, It is this: Don't lose your soul's salvation looking after other people's wives."

Changed His Mind. Mr. John H. Fisher, M.P. for Brant, tells a rather good story of a Liberal in his constituency. On that famous night in September, 1911, when the country learned that the Laurier Government and reciprocity had both been defeated, this staunch old Liberal partisan went home and told his wife to pack up.

"Brant has gone Tory and elected that villain Fisher. I won't live in the constituency any longer," said he in explanation.

"Where shall we go?" she saked.

"Oh, we'll find some decent place to live, all right," he answered.

Next morning he got The Toronto Globe and perused it sadly. He found that the Tories had almost swept Ontario. Finally he turned to his wife:
"You need not pack up, dear," he sadly explained, "there is no decent place to go to." Mr. John H. Fisher, M.P. for Brant, Late But On Time. "You are 24 hours late," said the stationmaster to the engineer of the Winnipeg express when it drew into the Toronto Union Station one Saturday afternoon.

"I am exactly on schedule time," "I am exactly on schedule time," was the reply.

By a strange coincidence the express from the west arrived precisely 24 hours behind its schedule time. The train should have resched Turonto at 3.55 p.m. Friday and pulled in at 3.35 p.m. Baturday.

The delay was caused by a washout which occurred on the main line between Chapleau and White River.

To leave the quiet court, to gain the Strand, to hail a belated hansom, was the work of a moment. By an odd contrivance of circumstance the luck that had attended every phase of his dual life was again exerted in his behalf. No one had noticed their entry into Clifford's inn: no one was moved to Clifford's inn; no one was moved to curiosity by their exit.
