those demands should be met. It did not follow that because the government were unable to make a reduction in 1884, or 1885, or 1886, that they would be unable to do so in 1889. The government had at all times and in all places given the people of the north to understand that they sympathized heartily with the strength of their claim, and that they would like to make some concession, but that with rived at by which his honorable friend from Northumberland, Mr. Tweedie, took a seat in the government. Mr. Blair then proceeded to show why it was that the condition of the finances of the province would now admit of a reduction being made. Hon. members would see that the territorial revenue for 1889 amounted to nearly $150,000. During the lumber season, now about closed, the crown land department had received information which showed that the lumber cut for this year would be the first that the lumber cut for this year would be the first that the lumber cut for this year would be the first that the lumber cut for this year would see that the first that the lumber cut for this year. The first that the lumber cut for this year would be the first that the lumber cut for this year.

received information which showed that the lumber cut for this year would be many millions in excess of that of last yoar. That information was to the effect that at the rate of $1 per M the territorial revenue from all sources would amount to $138,000 or $140,000 for the current year. This sum would enable the government to make as large appropriations for all the great public services, for schools, for roads and bridges, etc., as they had hitherto made.

ways been the statement of himself and his colleagues that whenever it was possible for the government to meet the wishes of the people of the North Shore they ought to do so. Mr. Blair then reviewed previous discussions in the house on this question, showing that he had always been willing, did circumstances permit, to reduce the tax. He had made no such statement at Elgin as that the stumpsee rate was they had to say when they went up there, later on in the discussion, and as to what terms they held out.

ECN. Mr. Blair
moved his resolution favoring the reduction of stumpage from $1.50 to $1.25, and supported his motion in a speech of an hour and a half. The resolution, he said, was based, in the first place, upon the principle that if the finances of the country would permit there should be some remission in the tax, and it would be for the house to say whether that was a principle to which they were ready to give their assent. He pointed out the many reasons that have been so often advanced why the stumpage dues should be reduced.
