ently occupied by ane Mucklewham, a moulder; ye see I happened to hae a sight acquaintance o Mrs. Mucklewham before she was Mrs. Mucklewham, and a dandy lass she was, ha she was the perfect brag o the fore street- never gaed oot, but she was dress't to the nines-her waist drawn like a wasp-an' she wore a bussel, that, withoot a word o' a lee, might a done pillow, an she was a wonderfully taen lass to a' kind o' haulins, balls, soirces, a' that kind o' trash, an' I's warrant wien the mounder got her, he thocht he had got an unco rugg, but I wish him luck o' his bargain. When I gaed up the stair, of coorse I chappit at the door, and was bidden come in. When I opened the door there's Mrs. Mucklewham, a bonnie like dearie she was ; she was sittin' right before the fire, on what had ance been a beautiful stuff-bottomed chair, but it had gotten disgraceful usage, an' she was just as black as a sweep. Ye see she had a mutch on her head, that, I'm sure wad clear her at the bar ony day, if she happened to be summoned by the Glasgow Water Company. She was busy makin' ready what I took to be about half-a-pound o' ham, an' I couldna say how many eggs. It seems this was a' till her ain' cheek, for there was a nice bit wean -although you couldna tell't the color o' its skin-sittin on the floor playin fitsel' wi' the bowl that his father decent man, had gotten his porridge oot o'-no that I wad tak' notice o' what I saw in onybody's house, only a body canna steek their e'en. Mrs. Mucklewhams's house wad never do for me; no that it was a bad house-far frae that-

Mrs. keeps four lodgers-they're awfu' folk thae Highland fork for keepin' lodgers an' swine recur with great frequency; and the anti-dotal doses, though increased, are found to onything that brings in the bits of bawbees. Mrs. Macintyre's hoose was won derfu' clean, so her an' me got on the crack have lost their efficacy. The stomach has I said she wad hae a heep o' wark ; she said now become more seriously deranged. All she had a "creat teal o' work." Quo 1. kinds of tood generate acid; and in this "Ye'll need to tak in a woman whiles." "Oh, no" quo she, "I take in no woman and stage the patient usually has recourse to the carbonates of soda or potash, which in no woman takes me in." But it cam' oot their turn give a temporary relief, though hoo the leddie gets her wark done It seems without in any way arresting the disorder. By this means dyspepsia, like an insidious serpent has fairly folded the victim within there's bits of lassocks stops aboon, an' bitlassocks stop below, and it seems the're wonderfu' keen to come about Mrs. Macinits embrace, and is squeezing him at his leasure. Everything he eats disagrees with tyre, for the sake o' an introduction to her odgers ; an' it seems they're wonderfu' will him, and seems to undergo some wondrous ing to do a bit turn, an' she's wonderfu' transformation. That which was served willing to let them. This is the way the up at the table as haggis, seems converted leddie gets her wark done ; but I didna miss two hours afterward into a ball of knotted to tell her that I thought very little o' her tow-a mutton chop becomes a fiery crab. indeed for bringin' a wheen light headed hizzies aboot her lodgers, but she just laughrending the interior with his cla.s; and every rice pudding has the intolerable ef-frontry to become revivified as a hedge-hog. After that come nanses and vomiting. You at me, and said, "it was ferry nat'rai for the lasses to be whaur the lads was,' --- "A u' for my part." quo' she, "I excuse the ; for when I was like them, I had my notions derive no benefit fom the food you swallow. From twelve stone weight we dwindle down for when I was like them, I had my notions like, an troth I have my notions yet; for if I was a wanter the day before the mo n, I would do all that was in my poor to get anither bit man; for a bit man's a great comfort. there's no use in denyin't." It was perfect scunnersome to hear the auld blether-in' Highland idiot. Nae wonder though men are conceatty when they hear the like o' you. I didna ken but I might hae taen o' you. She admitted it was a comfortable, cheat house; but, quo' she, 'if I can get it will be all the better.'
