A great change has taken place in the social life of Windsor. Instead of the customary calendar generally announcing in October of teas, receptions and balls, the women of the city have cast aside social frivolities and assumed their share in the great struggle Canadians are engaged in.

The Women's Institute is ranked as one of the most active organizations in Canada, helping to supply comforts and other needs for the allied soldiers. A leading Montreal lady now suggests that this society organize and equip a company of soldier boys in every little village and town to act as home guards if the necessity ever arises.

The Ridgeway Ministerial Association and Daughters of the Empire are on the outs as the result of the women's organization putting on a number of dances and card parties to raise money for patriotic purposes. The ministers frown upon the ladies' methods of raising money, and the practice provoked a number of sharp protests from pulpits on Sunday evening.

MELBOURNE SCHOOL FAIR

Plenty of Exhibits and a Good Programme of Sports.

Melbourne, Oct. 16th.—The first of the Middlesex county rural school fairs held at Melbourne was a decided success. A crowd of 900 people, congregated from every school section in Caradoc and Elfrid townships, viewed, compared and criticised the exhibits which were of every known variety and quality. The fair opened with a parade from the school grounds up through town, and comprised the scholars of the ten schools competing, headed by their teachers in autos, all marching very soldierlike to the singing of many patriotic songs by the scholars and cheered heartily by the crowds on the line of march. The fair itself was under the direction of Messrs. I. B. Whale and R. A. Finn, of the department of agriculture.

The Melbourne school fair officers for this year were:—Pres., Murray Laing; vice-pres., Walter Robinson; sec.-treas., Kenneth McLean. The judges:—Stock, P. Connon, Woodstock; poultry, P. D. Vahay, Guelph; grain and vegetables, R. E. Hinnman, Almyer, and C. W. Buchanan, Dutton; miscellaneous (which included insects, weaving, drawing, etc.), F. Newhouse, London; girls, work (cooking, sewing, fancy work, pressed flowers), Mrs. Douglas and Mrs. Snell, Wardsville.

While the exhibits were being judged, Messrs. R. A. Finn and R. W. Robinson started the sports and were ably assisted by the trustees of the different schools. These included races for both boys and girls, walking contests, three-legged races, threading the needle race, sack race, nail driving, and last but not least the trustees' and teachers' race, which brought forth much laughter from the scholars.

Along with these were the following contests:—Three-minute addresses on any patriotic subject, which were very highly praised by the audience, and the naming of weeds, which plainly showed the careful study given this particular subject by the scholars.

The Melbourne Patriotic Association were on the grounds with a booth, and this helped the scholars spend the best day in their lives (as one was heard to remark). Near the finish of the day the exhibits were sold by auction and the proceeds turned over to the Red Cross branch, then every one watched with keen interest the basketball game between the local school team and the Appin team, the result of which gave the locals another victory to their credit.

A much keener interest will be given this fair another year by both scholars and parents on account of this year's success.

High School Notes.

Field Day for the annual high school sports passed off very successfully on Thursday afternoon. The day was somewhat threatening and it rained, but the number and enthusiasm of the spectators was encouraging. Reeve McLachlan and Messrs. Snitter, McLean and Davidson acted as judges and kindly and ably assisted in the management. Most exciting and interesting event was the closely contested game of basketball between the Alvinston and Glencoe high school girls, the latter coming off victorious, the score being 14-19. The other items proved very enjoyable and ribbons were given as prizes. The following were the results of the different contests:—

Girls' walking race—M. McArthur, H. Sutherland, M. McRae.

100-yard dash for boys, jr.—N. McCallum, A. Aldred, E. Hussey.

100-yard dash for boys, jr.—L. Dalgety, G. Grant, R. Lethbridge.

HEROES OF DARDANELLES

Nursing Sister Frances Munroe Buried With Military Honors.

The following descriptive letter is from the pen of Mr. R. Winters (with No. 3 Stationary Hospital, "Somewhere in the Dardanelles," Sept. 10.) The death of Nursing Sister Frances Munroe was reported in The Transcript a few weeks ago. She was a daughter of the late Mac Munroe, of Wardsville, and leaves many relatives and friends and old school mates in that village and vicinity:—

The real sting of death was shown to the personnel of No. 3 stationary hospital this week when the grim reaper paid its first visit to the hospital and claimed two victims. One of them was Nursing Sister Frances Munroe, of Toronto, the first Canadian young woman to lay down her life in active service; and the other, Seaman George Sable, of the Royal naval division. Both were sufferers with dysentery and gave up their lives only after a long and determined fight against death.

Both were admitted to the hospital the same day and their deaths occurred four hours apart. Sister Munroe was the first to pass away and Seaman Sable followed shortly after. Everything possible was done for both but they gradually became weaker and life ebbed out peacefully to both. The last two nights of the fight they were on the brink of death and their death was hourly expected, but each hour they battled valiantly. Several times they were given only a few hours to live and everyone stood around momentarily expecting to hear that the fight had ended. Hope rose during the afternoon for both patients, but they came on their condition became worse and when the end came, with it came sadness.

Death at home is shrouded in sorrow, but thousands of miles from home and among people who have been acquaintances for only a few weeks it is sadder still. But the hardships that each suffer and the cause for which they are working would together a friendship that is sincere, and nothing could have been done for either unfortunate that was not done by the officers and others of the unit. The most detail for paying the last respects to those who had departed received the most careful attention and although the conditions were crude as compared with those at home, the funeral was all the more impressive and a picture is stamped on the memories of those who witnessed the double funeral that will not fade for many years.

No provision is made for caskets for the bodies of those who give up their lives for the empire in active service. The Greek custom of burial which exists on the island is to convey the remains of the deceased to the cemetery in a casket and the body there removed and interred, sewn in a sack made for that purpose. Lt.-Col. Casgrain would not permit this in the case of the sister so Greeks were employed to make a casket. Unexperienced in carpentry and handicapped for material they did their best and when the casket was completed it was covered with black crepe and small pieces of rope served as handles. The remains were then placed inside and the casket draped with the Union Jack, upon which rested the late sister's veil and uniform belt.

The coffin was placed on pedestals in the nurses' mess tent and seated around was the entire personnel, as well as Australian, English and Canadian officers of other units. Capt. Kuhring, Church of England chaplain, conducted the services. At the completion of this the two bodies were placed aboard separate transport wagons and a long march to the cemetery in the little Greek village behind the camp started. The road was rough and dusty and the sun hot. A firing party from an English regiment led the way at the slow pace. The transports followed behind, after which came the men and officers.

As the cortege passed through the little Greek village with its narrow, winding streets, proud and stately passage, bewildered it seemed at the sight. Many of the women were seen to dry their eyes. The only sign of flowers was a small bunch, hardly the sign of a carnation, which was thrown on the casket as it passed where an old Grecian lady stood. It was her silent tribute to the dead and as she stepped back out of the way something seemed to add more sorrow to the occasion.

The graves were immediately behind a
