

PART I

BODY

*" Was that his point of turning? He had thought
The stations of his course should rise unsought,
As altar-stone or ensigned citadel.*

*But lo! the path is missed, he must go back;
Yet though no light be left nor bird now sing
As here he turns, he'll thank God, hastening,
That the same goal is still on the same track."*