By the banks of the river I wandered alone and into the pure depths I dropped a small stone; It sank from my sight ere I went on my way As the eddying circles were faded away.

I passed by that spot in a day or two more, And the waters flowed on as I saw them be-But no ripple came over the surface so clear, To tell that the pebble was still lying there. So the harsh word from lips, p'rhaps unheed-ing, will fall, And sink to some gay heart, tho' tender withal. And the pain of that heart seems to pass in a sign— Yet the pang will remain, tho' unseen it may lie.

There is many a rose that is fair to the view.
And many a flow'r that retains its bright hue;
But one drop of care to its core has found So slowly and sadly it sinks to decay.

Ah! there's many a heart which is withering And many a silent tear falls day by day, And the solace is sought not of friends who Tho' the dark surge of sorrow still sweeps o'er the soul.

Oh! pluck not one petal from out a gag flow'r.
To leave it to wither and die in an hour;
Destroy not the bloom you can never restore,
But cherish it fondly, by day more and more.

Rather speak the kind word to the night broken-hearted,
Shed light on the soul from which joy has departed;
Let the balm of sweet speech on the stricken heart fall,
Speak kindly to each one, or speak not at all.
