D Company
At the Theatre

Last night the N.C.O.'s and men of D company, Dufferin Rifles, under Capt. Hicks, spent an enjoyable evening under the patronage of Ernie Moutie, the manager, at the Brant theatre. A program of splendid vaudeville and movies passed the evening, and the Duffs were not slow in showing their keen appreciation of the turns provided. One particularly was the Pepper Bros., whose variety turns, from Russian trumpeters to Scottish pipers, gave much pleasure. Lorelle, the blind violinist, received quite a number of encores, to which he responded with finesse and power. The closing orchestral music of "God Save the King" was a scene that must have left an impression on those civilians whose careless courtesy seldom recognize it, as to a man the company stood to attention.

The latest joined recruits of D company have been sworn in and are now on the strength of the battalion. New instruments for the brass band are being purchased, including a trombone, four clarinets and two cornets, also music stands and considerable new music. For the bugle band a bass drum is being procured and the bugles have also been re-titted.

The body of a man thought to be G. J. Pilette a Belgian evidently of C. N. R. timekeeper was found in the bush near North Bay.
