

THE FREEDRICTION

VOL. IV., NO. 44.

FREEDRICTION, N. B., SATURDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1893.

$1.00 PER YEAR.

HOTELS.
QUEEN HOTEL,
Queen Street, Fredericton, N. B.
THIS HOTEL has been REBUILT AND PAINTED IN THE MOST ATTRACTIVE STYLE. AS BEHIND THE STABLES OF THE PARLOR, OFFICE, and BEAUTIFUL BREAKFAST ROOM ON Ground Floor. FREIGHT VENTILATION and SEWERAGE throughout. LARGE and AIRY BEDROOMS; COMMODIOUS BATH ROOMS and CLOSETS on each floor; and is capable of accommodating ONE HUNDRED GUESTS.
It is rapidly growing in popular favor, and is today one of the LEADING, as well as the MOST COMFORTABLE HOTELS IN THE DOMINION.
The Table is always supplied with every delicacy available. The Cooking is highly commended, and the Staff of Assistants are ever ready to oblige.
There are two of the largest and most conveniently arranged RAMBLE ROOMS IN Canada, having full entrance and also connecting with Hotel.
HOMES and CARRIAGES of every style are to be had at the LIBRARY STABLES of the Proprietor, connected with the Hotel.
The "QUEEN" is centrally located, directly opposite to the Steamboat and "Queen Ferry Landing, and within a minute's walk of the Parliament Buildings, Court House and of the Government Office.
A FIRST-CLASS BARBER SHOP IN CONNECTION.

HEALTH FOR ALL!
HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.
THE PILLS
PURIFY THE BLOOD, correct all Disorders of the Liver, Stomach, Kidneys and Bowels. They invigorate and restore to health Debilitated Constitutions, and are invaluable in all Complaints incident to Females of all Ages. For Children and the Aged they are precious.
THE OINTMENT
Is an infallible remedy for Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, Old Wounds, Sores and Ulcers. It is famous in Germany and elsewhere. For Disorders of the Chest it has no equal.
FOR SORE THROATS, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS,
Glandular Swellings, and all Skin Diseases, it has no rival; and for Constipation and Stiff Joints it acts like a charm.
Manufactured only at Professor Holloway's Establishment, 78, NEW OXFORD STREET, (late 533, OXFORD STREET), LONDON.
and are sold at 1s. 14d., 2s., 4s., 6d., 11s., 25s., and 50s. each Box or Pot and may be had of all Medicine Vendors throughout the World.
* Purchasers should look to the label on the Pots and Boxes. If the address is not
J. B. 18 533, Oxford Street, London, they are spurious.

HUNDREDS WERE DUPED.
Farmers Who Desired to Wed a Foreign House.—The Fair One Was a Man.
NAGARA FALLS, Ont., Sept. 25.—One of the deepest laid schemes, through both the United States and Canadian mails, was unearthed here late Saturday night by the arrest of a slick-looking man wearing a close cut black beard and fashionable clothing, at Niagara Falls, N. Y., who has been living in gay style at the Hotel Atlantic since early in August. He gave his name as W. C. Woodward, New York. About the same time as his arrival here the following notice appeared in the various papers throughout the United States, from New York to San Francisco:—
MATRIMONIAL.—A REFINED and CULTIVATED young lady, living unhappily with her guardian, a good house-keeper, fond of home life and worth $50,000, wishes to correspond with some honorable agriculturist or stock raiser who is matrimonially inclined; no attention will be paid to answers unless the writer contemplates immediate matrimony; full particulars to be given; standing relative to age, close picture, if convenient. Address P. O. Box 9, Niagara Falls Centre, Ont., Canada.
Since the publication of this, letters have been pouring into this box much to the disgust of the postmaster, and seldom a day passed that did not bring from seventy-five to one hundred letters from glibly people, mostly farmers, many enclosing photographs, and some came from Plymouth, Ind.; Long Beach, Cal.; Ocala, Fla.; St. Paul, Minn. and hosts of other places. The best specimens were picked out by Woodward, who replied in a lady's hand, and, by those artifices, succeeded in inducing the writers to send her money so that she could slip away from her cruel guardian and come to them and get married. One victim sent her one hundred dollars from New Jersey, and then, suspecting something wrong, came on and finally reported the fraud to her guardian, who, upon a search, sent Dimsan of Niagara Falls, N. Y., to act with him when the proper time came. Easily obtaining a description of the man who called for mail at the postoffice, he kept watch. Then the man, who evidently had a boy for the mail, appeared on Saturday evening, chief Young saw a boy call for the mail. He followed him and noticed a man meet the boy at the top of the Clinton House here, and took the mail from him. The boy ran on and the mail appeared the man and took the mail from the officer. When the latter returned the room, Woodward was calmly opening his letters, aided by his accomplice, and noticing the officers, Woodward jumped up as if shot and went down stairs. Of course the officers followed him. In the meantime chief Dimsan heard of the arrival of Woodward at the hotel, and came in just as Woodward was going out. He had a chase after him, but caught him and locked him up. The other man and the letters were taken to police headquarters, where they were inspected by inspector Charles E. Lewis and the officers.
With each of the letters the following newspaper clipping was attached:—
"The reception given last night in honor of Miss Myriam A. Reed, was a very pleasant and enjoyable affair. Those present were: Judge A. B. Glendon of New York City, Dr. Edward C. Marble and wife of Boston, Rev. E. B. Darnmore of Brooklyn, N. Y., and the Hon. James P. Mahony of Buffalo. The affair was made up of a reception and a concert. Miss Reed is a recent graduate of Vassar College. She is an accomplished pianist, and also took first prize in her cooking class. A great many of the delicacies served at the entertainment were made up of fair handed money. It is stated that Miss Reed is returning to her home will be short, as her guardian announced last night that he intended to take her in a short time to Europe, in order that she may finish her musical education there. Mr. Howard A. Reed will also accompany them, and will complete his architectural studies, perhaps in Germany. One of our largest book publishers has offered Miss Reed a handsome sum of money for a cook book compiled by her, which proposition she has accepted, and has already allowed him to furnish the material for the book book the proceeds derived from it would be given to some deserving charity, because she being financially independent has no need for the money."
TAKEN TO BUFFALO.
Chief Young, as soon as the arrest was made, handed the case with all papers over to the United States authorities. Deputy United States Marshall Colt of Buffalo arrived at the Falls yesterday and took the prisoner to Buffalo. Postmaster Anderson of Niagara Falls Centre states that the man Moon, the name he gave Anderson when he rented Box 9, had received several hundred letters since the first of August, many being registered, addressed "Miss Myriam A. Reed, Box 9."
At the present time some 30 letters are at the postoffice for Myriam, among them a registered one. All of them have been detained by the police. There arrived today a box of flowers addressed to the fair one. It turns out that the accomplice Brown is an ex-assistant attorney of Niagara county, N. Y., and is well known around Wilson, N. Y. He is allowed his freedom on bail, and those who know Brown claim that he has been duped into the swindle by Woodward. The two men have an office in the Gluck building at Niagara Falls, N. Y., doing business as Woodward & Brown solicitors. The police are of the opinion that there is more behind the matter than has yet come to light, and a great deal of credit is due Chief Young for unearthing such a deep scheme of swindle with the meagre grapple at the postoffice for Myriam, among them a registered one. He commenced the trial from the newspaper clipping of the grand reception to Miss Myriam A. Reed at Niagara Falls, having graduated from Vassar College with honors, and the chief worked the trial as he did in the Birchall case, with the imaginary electric lighted farm Birchall dupped poor Benwell and Pelly.
A LUCKY LITTLE BLACKMAN.
A poorly clad little negro, almost pure black, with sparse, kinky hair, wandered into the city hall, New York, the other day, and said that he was in need. There was something about his way of saying it, that startled everybody within both light and hearing.
"Where do you come from?" asked messenger Edward Heatherton, when he heard him.
"From Ireland, sorr," replied the little man, differentially.

"You don't mean you're an Irishman?"
"Ye sorr. I was born five mile from Skibbereen, in the county Cork, sorr."
"Thigum thu Gaelic?"
"Thigum thu Gaelic?"
"Thigum thu Gaelic?"
The little man began to rattle off Gaelic at a rate that necessitated the calling in of clerk Michael F. Blake as interpreter. He pronounced George Grant, for that was the negro's name, a genuine Irishman from the smoked variety.
Wiskinkle Daniel M. Donegan, the Tammany Hall collector, happened in while the Gaelic test was being applied.
"What is it?" he asked.
"An Irishman."
"Where's he from?"
"Skibbereen."
"That's my place in Ireland. What does he want?"
"Money."
"Sancay as mine. Everybody from Skibbereen's on it."
The little man made a goodly collection of silver, and bowed himself out with "One hundred thousand thanks," and "Balla na clath."

A COLOSSAL CALAMITY.
The Miner's Strike Affects 1,500,000 Persons—Half Are Out of Work.
London, Sept. 30.—The result of yesterday's miners' conference, permitting the men to return to work where the old rates were obtainable, will mean the opening of numbers of small collieries on Monday; but the majority of the large mine owners are determined not to open their pits until a reduction has been arranged. It is calculated that twenty thousand miners will resume on Monday, all of whom will pay one shilling daily to assist the strikers.
The increase of 5 shillings a ton for coal in London yesterday, makes a total rise of sixteen shillings since the beginning of the strike. Coal was retail at two shillings per cwt., the usual price being thirteen pence. It is stated that all the coal in the Midlands have been cornered.
In the cotton trade, factories are working on short time, and more than ten thousand operatives have been idle. Many relief funds have been started for the miners' starving families.
Emile Zola, in contributing two pounds writes: "I have seen on the spot the pitiful sufferings of the wives and children of the miners in the Pas de Calais district. Let peace be made in the name of the children and mothers."
In Chesterfield alone, 1,500 children are being fed every day, and fifteen hundred families are assisted with food. The Mayor of Sheffield has convened a meeting of the Mayor of Leeds, Bradford, Nottingham, Derby and Barnsley to discuss the situation, and endeavor to formulate a scheme likely to be acceptable to the miners and employers.
Paris, Sept. 30.—A few minutes were opened in the Pas de Calais district, but 42,000 men are still on strike.
London, Oct. 1.—On Monday, coal will be eleven dollars a ton in London, and it is expected that by the end of the week it will be twelve, or even more. Taking the Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one full day's supply on hand, and even if all the midland mines, which it is hoped will reopen on Monday, should do so, transit will be so slow that the scarcity will last for another month. That is what Londoners principally know about the account it is said that there is less than one