A disgraceful street fight took place just in front of Smith's International hotel, on Saturday afternoon. The combatants numbered at one time half-sdozen, and had two or three different rows. We hope that after the evidence that will be brought out on Saturday, the mayor will give explicit orders that the town constables must prosecute these rowdies for disturbing the peace. The International hotel has long been looked upon with very open suspicion. The authorities of the town should combine with the license commissioners, and usist upon a more rigorous prosecution of those who are so shamefully violang the

METTARY.—The Bowmanville Statesman of last week has the following regarding the decease of the father of A. J. Moore, of Goderich High School:—The late James Moore was born in Bradworthy, Devoushire, England, in April, 1864, and died on the 30th day of July 1885. Emigrating to Canada in 1853 he settled on the Base line of Darlington. His conversion took place in 1860. Ever since Brc. Moore has been a steady, constant Christian, a member of the church and a class-leader for many years. His house was the usual stopping place of the ministers. For several years he may be said to have constituted the nucleus of the Base line church, Darlingten. His last conscious words were, in reply to some sympathetic grieving of his wife, "Cheer up; I have a hope beyond the skies; I'm going to Jesus, it won't be long till we meet again." He leaves an aged widow, and a family of three sons on the grounds, and the managers of the fair must have taken in a snug sum in licenses from the various impositions. On the whole, the impression that formed
