

The New Encyclopaedia Britannica,

11th EDITION,

is indispensable to all who believe that world-wide knowledge and accurate information are the most valuable of assets.

In whatever sphere of life men or women find their interests to-day, they are brought more and more in face with this fact—that at countless points, in work, in reading, in conversation, they meet with questions which they feel they ought or would like to answer, with subjects of which they know too little, with problems of action, of conduct, of theory or practice, on which they would like to have trustworthy information.

No characteristic is more marked in the modern world than the widening and quickening of interests brought about by the spread of education, by the growth of the press, by the closer relationship between peoples and countries, once widely separated, now knit together by the increased speed, ease and cheapness of communications.

With every new interest, with every new relationship of life, whether of business or pleasure, of work or recreation, come fresh streams of questions, exciting curiosity, arousing desire for knowledge, demanding answers. The value of this widening and quickening of interests has been happily expressed by one of the most distinguished of British engineers,

Sir Alexander Kennedy. At a speech to the students of Birmingham University he said:—

"To obtain the greatest pleasure, and the most worthy pleasure, out of our few years of life, it is not less essential that you should have so framed your faculties as to take interest in, and pleasure in, the most various matters, in everything, in fact, around you and about you, and even in many things far off and inaccessible, whether physically or intellectually. . . . The widening of your interests is desirable even on the narrowest ground, namely that it will make you more efficient in your own everyday work."

Where, however, can this laudable curiosity, this stimulating desire for knowledge be satisfied? To what source of information can the enquirer turn? Few are the possessors of a complete library. Not every place has a public library. Even with these resources it is not easy to gain access to the right book. It was, indeed, to provide such a source of general information, to supply a demand which has grown with the growth of knowledge since the publication of the first edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica in 1768 that works of universal reference, "complete circles of information" or encyclopaedias have been published.

In respect of what special features does the latest (11th) edition of the Encyclopaedia

Britannica claim to be an indispensable resource to those who wish to know, who feel that the widening of their interests is desirable?

It is the latest, fullest, and most authoritative work of UNIVERSAL REFERENCE in any language.

No other work of such a kind has been written upon such an ample scale that its 40,000 articles CAN BE READ for their intrinsic interest.

The man who is master of his own special subject constantly needs immediate and exact information upon facts and theories, strictly outside his particular sphere, yet, in the ever-widening correlation of knowledge, bearing upon it in the most essential manner. The clergyman, for example, needs trustworthy authorities on history, philosophy, modern science and sociology; the engineer upon chemistry, geology, physical science, or mathematics; the manufacturer on law, finance, geographical statistics, and chemical processes; and so on in endless combination.

To one who wishes to embark on AN ORGANIZED COURSE OF STUDY of any particular subject, the new Encyclopaedia Britannica, carefully and elaborately planned, and published in its entirety at one time, provides in an exhaustive and closely-related series of articles a secure structure and foundation for the further elaboration to which the valuable bibliographical sections will guide him.

It will prove an UNFAILING AND EVER-READY RESOURCE TO THE GENERAL READER, who desires constant information on innumerable points in his daily reading of a newspaper, a magazine, historical or literary memoirs, books of travel, or even an historical novel.

NOTHING IS ALIEN TO IT, that can be of human interest, from the profound speculations of philosophy and science to the humblest game or pastime.

At the educational outset of a career, professional, or commercial, READY ACCESS TO THE BEST AND MOST AUTHORITATIVE BOOKS is of the first importance. The Encyclopaedia Britannica provides in the most practical form the latest results achieved by the best experts of the world in every conceivable field.

The printed matter in the Encyclopaedia Britannica contains the equivalent of some 300 separate books of ordinary size (100,000 words), yet when printed on India paper, it occupies the SPACE OF A SMALL BOOKSHELF.

The contents of its 28 volumes, if divided according to subject-matter, may be regarded as including a HISTORY OF THE WORLD, an INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY OF BIOGRAPHY, a GAZETTEER of the largest scale, an ENCYCLOPAEDIA OF RELIGION, PHILOSOPHY, AND SOCIOLOGY, a LIBRARY OF INTERNATIONAL LITERATURE, A HANDBOOK TO ALL THE ARTS AND SCIENCES, TO MANUFACTURERS, INDUSTRY, AND ENGINEERING, and a complete ATLAS of the world.

The special terms of subscription now offered in Newfoundland will be withdrawn shortly and the prices charged for the new Encyclopaedia Britannica will then be advanced by not less than $2 ($10.00).

In announcing before publication the forthcoming issue of a new edition (the 11th) of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, the Cambridge University Press invited applications, in advance of publication, at specially low prices. These terms were withdrawn, and the price advanced in the United Kingdom, in Canada, in the United States and in India upon May 31st last, when the 28 volumes of text and 29th, or Index Volume, were published and in course of delivery.

The price now higher in the United Kingdom and elsewhere than in Newfoundland.

The advantage of the low prices, it was felt, should not, however, be withheld from other dominions of the British Empire, or, indeed, from any place inhabited by the English-speaking peoples, to whom the Encyclopaedia Britannica especially appeals. It is, therefore, with the purpose of placing the reading public of Newfoundland in the same advantageous position in regard to price that was enjoyed by others up to May 31st last that these special terms of subscription at low prices are now offered. They will only remain in force for a short period.

A cheap book at the present price.

The book is now, therefore, at its cheapest, and the present low price may be more easily afforded by all owing to the institution of serial payments. $5.00 is all the immediate outlay that is required to obtain delivery of the 28 volumes, and after they have been received purchase may be completed in monthly payments of the same small amount.

Illustrated Prospectus, 56 specimen pages, two from each of the 28 volumes, our specimen plate illustrations, and full details of terms, post-free, on application to the Cambridge University Press Office, Box 990, Board of Trade Building, St. John's, Newfoundland.

LONDON, Nov. 7. Secretary Grey took occasion in the Commons to-day to read the so-called sensational press homily on the danger of spreading false news offensive to the nations. Some of these days, he remarked, if false news continues to be reported, public resentment and excitement would get beyond control of the governments concerned. The incidents what called for these words were the alleged interview with the British Ambassador at Vienna and the alleged passage in the speech of Home Secretary McKenna, both strongly criticizing Germany. The minister explained that neither the Ambassador nor McKenna had been guilty of the alleged indiscretions, but before this was known in Germany, the incidents had been construed as a direct public international affront, which had been the cause of great resentment and called forth the request for explanations from the German government. The Minister continued that there was a tendency on the part of the newspapers of Britain and Germany to put improper constructions upon the actions of the British and German governments respectively.

PEKIN, Nov. 7. The report that the city has fallen into the hands of the revolutionists is without foundation. There was no fighting whatsoever here. There is no evidence that the Emperor or Regent fled. Prince Ching continues to act as Premier pending the arrival of Yuan Shi Kai. General Wu, a brilliant young military officer, recently appointed Governor of Shan Province, was assassinated to-day.

Special Evening Telegram.

LONDON, Nov. 7. The murder of General Wu, Governor of Shan Province, was brutal. He was asleep in his tent in the military encampment at Shikia-Chang when twenty Manchu soldiers rushed in past the guard and murdered him. When the officers and general staff arrested the Manchus, the latter stated that Wu had gone over to the revolutionary side and was betraying the Manchus.

LONDON, Nov. 7. Serious news is received daily from Angola, a Portuguese possession in Western Africa, of the revolt among the natives, which is spreading rapidly. They are burning and pillaging everything in their path. In the region of Caecere and Cassal the tribes attacked the settlements and massacred a minister and several Europeans, after first subjecting them to terrible tortures.

Klark-Urban Co.

ITS POPULARITY INCREASING.

It is quite evident that the more our people see of the Klark-Urban Co. the more they wish to see of them, for the reproductions of their plays are as largely attended as the first performances. Last night well demonstrated this when another overflowing audience attended the T. A. Theatre to witness the reproduction of "His Last Dollar," Messrs. Klark, Urban, Schrieber, Webb and the other gentlemen taking part, as well as Maisie Cecil and the rest of the ladies, performed their varied parts with artistic skill, and applause hearty and spontaneous often greeted them. The specialties were of a most interesting nature, and Robert's interesting work on the flying trapeze was an exceptionally taking feature. His surprising and daring feats were loudly and frequently applauded. To-night the company will produce "Across the Desert," one of the best to be staged here yet, and no doubt this will be liberally patronized. Thursday week a matinee will be given for the benefit of the city orphanages.

Herewith will be found the picture of a stylishly dressed lady. Around her figure are concealed the faces of her eight daughters. Can you find their eight faces? If so, mark the faces with an X. Cut out the picture and send it to us, together with a slip of paper on which you have written the words, "I have found the eight faces and marked them."

write plainly and neatly, and have him or her enter this contest in his or her name for you. First, agree with the person who is to do the writing, that you are to receive any prize money or prize that may be awarded. This may take up a little of your time, but as there is TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS in cash and One Thousand premiums given away, it is worth your time to take a little trouble over this matter.

Write the above words plainly and neatly, as both writing and neatness will be considered in this contest, in case of ties.

Should you not happen to be a neat writer, point out this advertisement to some friend of yours who can Remember, all you have to do is to mark the faces, cut out the picture, and write on a separate piece of paper the words, "I have found the eight faces and marked them."

We do not ask You to Spend One Cent of Your Money in order to enter this Contest

Send your answer at once; we will reply by Return Mail telling you whether your answer is correct or not, and we will send you a complete Prize List, together with the names and addresses of persons who have recently received over One Thousand Dollars in Cash Prizes from us, and full particulars of a simple condition that must be fulfilled. (This condition does not involve the spending of any of your money.)

Winners of Cash Prizes in our late competitions will not be allowed to enter this Contest. Below will be found the names and addresses of a few persons who have won some of our larger prizes in recent contests. Your opportunity to win a good round sum is equally as good as that of anyone else, as all previous winners of cash prizes are debarred from entering this contest.

TWOILLINGATE, To-day. Even the Tories here are mad because the Government did not send our mail by the Notre Dame, which arrived here from Lewisporte on Monday evening, with the Clyde's passengers. Seeing the Clyde was ashore the Captain of the Notre Dame asked for mail but was refused. He could have finished here on Monday and taken back return mail to-day. The mail that left St. John's Sunday has not yet arrived. That's how the public and business men are treated by the Picnic Party. We want a business Government not a cabbage Government.

Took to Profanity When Wife Spent 10 Cents in Three Days.

The meanest man within 100 miles of Elgin, Ill., according to the petition of his wife for separate maintenance, filed recently, is Olaf Gylleck. His wife says she had to earn the funds on which the household was operated. She kept chickens, but while eggs sold for 12 cents in stores, Olaf charged her 35 cents a dozen for those she used at home, including those he ate. He bought all her clothes, and always taking advantage of the greatest bargains, regardless of quality, embarrassed her by odd sizes, inharmonious combinations of colors and shape and fit of the garments.

On one occasion, she avers, he went away leaving her ten cents to operate the household. Three days later he returned and stormed profanely when he learned she had spent the whole ten cents. She says her husband is worth $6,000.

The World's Longest Chimney.

Wales Has One Two Miles High, and a Brook Through It.

Wales has probably the longest chimney in the world. It is two miles high, and has a brook running through it. The chimney is connected with the copper works at Cwmavon, near Aberavon. This is how it came to be built. About 60 years ago the copper smoke from these works was the plague of the neighboring countryside. It settled upon and destroyed the grass for 20 miles round, while the sulphur and arsenic in the fumes affected the hoofs of cattle, causing gangrene. The company tried all sorts of devices to remedy the trouble but in vain.

Finally, Mr. Robert Brenton, who was later engineer of the Sind Railway in India, solved the problem. The copper works are at the foot of a high steep mountain. Mr. Brenton constructed a flue or chimney running continuously from the base to about 100 feet above the summit, following the natural slope of the ground.
