Drawing Out Steel Splinters.

A Swiss scientist, Dr. Haab, Director of the Zurich Eye Clinic, has designed what is said to be the most powerful and efficient electromagnet, for the use of oculists, in existence so far. Dr. Haab's electromagnet is for the purpose of extracting foreign substances such as steel from the eye. Two of the special advantages of this particular magnet are its high power, and the fact that the power can be turned off at any time by the foot of the operator, so that the magnet need not be moved in order to stop its action. The magnet is mounted on a castron pillar in such a manner that it can easily be turned in any direction.

While specially designed for the use of oculists, it is said to be well adapted for the extraction of iron filings, etc., from wounds in any part of the body, thus saving tedious and painful operations with pinners or other surgical operations. This wonderful instrument is described and illustrated in the Scientific American.

"Nine-to-One" Exchange.

London's Newest Telephone Device. A record in telephone construction has been achieved with the new "Nine-to-One" Avenue Exchange in the City of London. The full equipment, capable of dealing with 10,000 subscribers, was completely installed in six months. No other exchange of a similar size has been made ready in less than a year. As it stands at present the "Nine-to-One" Exchange is worth approximately £150,000. The exchange has been christened the "Nine-to-One" because, by a novel system, a call from a subscriber lights lamps in front of nine operators, so that the chances are nine to one that an operator will be disengaged and able to answer the call instantaneously. At present the new Avenue is the only exchange in this country where this calling method is installed, although a much smaller exchange at Ilford is being constructed on the same principle.

The transfer of the old Avenue Exchange subscribers to the new building has been postponed from to-day—the date originally fixed, until next Saturday, in order that every single line may have its effectiveness tested by experts. No fewer than twenty-eight underground cables, containing 15,200 pairs of wires, connect the "Nine-to-One" with its subscribers and the other exchanges of London. In the new exchange every subscriber's line is connected with the operating board at three different points, and when the subscriber calls a tiny electric lamp glows at each of the three points, which come within a section worked by nine operators. Directly one of the operators attends to the call all three lights go out. Three hundred girls will be employed at the exchange.—Daily Mail.

Shock for Assistant.

The Lord Chief Justice, Baron Alverstone, entered upon his seventieth year on December 22. A keen athlete and a firm believer in early rising, his lordship, of whom it was once declared "he is the sweetest-tempered man in the world," has always enjoyed the best of health, and only about three years ago he laughingly challenged to put on the gloves with a man of his own age. When at the bar he used to get up at five o'clock every morning. On one occasion he wanted to discuss the details of a case with one of his assistants, so he requested the young man to call next morning. "At what time?" asked the junior. "Oh, be at my house at 6.30." This announcement greatly shocked the assistant. Still, he kept the appointment, arriving absolutely on the stroke of time, but he had stayed up all night to do so. Lord Alverstone is very fond of music. For many years he sang in a church choir, and can play the organ like a professional.

Buy a Haunted House.

Sir John Simon, Solicitor-General of Britain, is a courageous man. He has bought an old manor house reputed to be haunted. It is known as Fritwell and is located near Banbury. Sir John paid $35,500 for the estate. The spooky reputation of the house arose from three tragedies. A man was killed there in a duel in 1712. The next tenants, Longueville by name, were involved in a great scandal. Two brothers of the family were in love with the same lady, and the story runs that the younger imprisoned the elder in what was known as "a human dog kennel" in the attic for fourteen years. The elder brother's death was attributed to starvation. Sir Baldwin Wake, who bought the place shortly after the Longueville's tenancy expired, was suspected of having killed his son in a quarrel over a card game. According to the tradition the body was concealed by Sir Baldwin and another son in the "dog kennel." Ten years ago the house was renovated and the "dog kennel" removed. Entrance to a sliding door in the rear of a cupboard.

"Luck of Muncaster."

Lord Muncaster celebrated his 77th birthday on Christmas Day. His lordship served with the 90th Light Infantry in the Crimea, and for twenty years he had a seat at intervals in the House of Commons. It was at Muncaster that Henry VI. was sheltered after the battle of Towton in 1461 by Sir John Pennington to whom the monarch, so the legend goes, gave a glass cup, since known as the "Luck of Muncaster." Attached to it there is a tradition that "as long as the 'Luck of Muncaster' remains unsmashed there will never be a male heir wanting for Muncaster Castle."

Man Shot Accidentally.

Mr. W. R. Howley yesterday afternoon had a message from Paradise via Baine Harbor stating that a man named Daniel Pomroy had accidentally shot himself. The message asked for medical aid and Mr. Howley was authorized by the Government to try and secure a physician at Placentia, and that should he not be prepared to set out at once, to get the resident doctor of Burin to go. No particulars were given in the message.

BONSPIEL FOR CHARITY.—The members of the Carlers' Association met in their club rooms last night and at the suggestion of Mr. Jno. R. Bennett they decided to hold a bonspiel, the proceeds of which will be devoted to procuring coal for the poor. This is a most worthy object and the curlers deserve credit.

Silk From Wood.

"You can not make a silk purse out of a sow's ear" is a familiar quotation, remarks The Scientific American. Its use, however, will probably be discontinued by the next generation, as silk is now made artificially by mechanical means out of material which, if not a product of the pork packer's slaughter house, is about as low down in the aesthetic scale. Wood pulp—made from spruce trees, or in fact from any variety of wood—is dissolved in various chemicals and the solution is spun into a beautiful lustrous yarn, the spun and gloss of which outvalues the most costly cocoon silk. An industry of enormous proportions has been built up with the development of this new product, factories in Austria, France, Germany, and more recently England, turning out many thousands of pounds of the yarn every day.

Newfoundland.

Where rocky headlands gleam
O'er ocean's furrowed brow,
Bright land of lake and stream;
Blue sky, keen frost and snow,
There perched in cove or glen
Quaint homes—a scattered few—
Kind folks, the fishermen,
Hospitable and true.
In Isle of Newfoundland.

When sparkling waters flow
O'er river's rocky bed,
And hills from lofty brow
With dark fir trees are spread,
They glitter in the snow,
In pure and silvery sheen,
In early summer's glow
With "wearing of the green."
Fair Isle of Newfoundland.

May each be true to each,
Proud of their Native Land,
And feel within their reach
The grip of Brother's hand;
May every discord cease
And liberty's bright smile,
With full content, and peace
For all, shine o'er this Isle
Of Newfoundland.

Will Cause a Further Reduction.

Special to Evening Telegram.

LONDON, Jan. 31. The Daily Telegraph says that there is every reason to anticipate that of all the great Powers of the world the United States will be the only one that will not begin the construction of an armoured ship this year. The decision not to begin building any vessels is probably with a view to solving the existing difficulties as to crews. In this event, expenditures on the American fleet, which for two years past has been reduced, will show a further decline this year, and a still greater one for 1913. The result will be that the American fleet, which now occupies second place in gross effective tonnage, will sink below the total displacement of the French Navy, ranking fourth among the world's fleets.

Chamberlain and Home Rule

Special to Evening Telegram. LONDON, Jan. 31. At the Unionist rally last night, Austen Chamberlain congratulated Carson, Londonderry and Ulster Unionists on their stand. They had made it clear, they said, that conspiracy to break up the constitution, emasculate the House of Lords, and pass Home Rule without the direct mandate of the people, could never be carried without civil war in Ireland. The Government forgot to reckon with the courage and patriotism of Ulster. Home Rule, he believed still-born. If the claims of Irish Nationalists for Home Rule were good, the claims of Ulster for separate treatment were equally good. Account must be taken of the differences of history between the two sections of the Irish people. The Bill, he said, was useless, and the history of the Irish parliament was an inglorious one. It gave people no peace or prosperity. There was no practical grievance which they could point to to justify their demand for breaking partnership with the United Parliament.

Martial Law Proclaimed.

Special Evening Telegram. LONDON, Jan. 31. A terrible panic among officials at Tien Tsin caused many of them to seek shelter to-day in the foreign concessions. Martial law has been proclaimed in the native city, the Mayor has resigned fearing that the lives of his family are endangered, and sent them to take refuge in the French concession.

Schoolboy "Howlers."

The American war was started because the people would persist in sending their parcels through the post without stamps. Lord Raleigh was the first man to see the invisible Armada. The South of the U. S. A. grows oranges, figs, melons, and a great quantity of preserved fruits, especially tinned meats. The saddest thing King John did was to lose his crown in the laundry. The father of Henry IV. was John o' Groats. Prince William was drowned in a butt of Malmsey wine; he never laughed again. Richard II. is said to have been murdered by some historians; his real fate is uncertain. The tides are caused by the sun drawing the water out and the moon drawing it in again. A circle is a line which meets its other end without ending. Q. A man has x miles to travel; he goes a miles by train, b miles by boat, and c miles he walks; the rest he cycles? How far does he cycle? A. d, e, f, g, h, i, j, k, l, m, n, o, p, q, r, s, t, u, v, w, miles. If the air contains more than 100 per cent. of carboic acid it is very injurious to health. Algebraical symbols are used when you don't know what you are talking about. A circle is a straight line drawn as round as possible with a dot in the middle. The mechanical advantage of a long pump handle is that you can have someone to help you pump. St. Andrew is the patient saint of Scotland; the patient saint of England is Union Jack. An old soldier is called a vegetarian. A centipede is a French measure of length. The Home Office is where Home Rule is made. A Bishop without a diocese is called a Suffragette. In the houses of the poor the drains are in a fearful state and quite unfit for human habitation. —The Daily News, London.
