at midnight says: South of the Ancre we continued to improve our positions, pushing detachments forward at places into the enemy's advanced trenches. During a bombardment by our ar-tillery of one section of the enemy's front yesterday ten hostile gun pits were seen to be destroyed and four-teen others severely damaged. Five day a big fire was caused by our ar-tillery in a village much used by the enemy's transport for supply purposes. There was great aerial activity yesterday. A hughly successful raid by about fifty of our machines was carried out on an important railway carried out on an important railway junction where much damage was done, two trains containing ammunition being destroyed and many explosions being caused. A number of other raids on enemy railway works and sidings, aerodromes and other points of military importance were destroyed and five others driven to earth and damaged, besides many others which broke off the fight and were seen to descend, but could not be watched to the ground, as our machines were too busily engaged. Five of our machines are missing.

THE STORY OF THE INVADER.

The commander and 20 members of the crew of the Zeppelin which was forced to land near an Essex coast town were arrested by the village constables as they were marching along the road in the blackness of the night, according to the latest eye witness. "I am the commander of the German airship that has just comdown and these are my crew," said the leader of the men, when arrested by the constable. When the officer ad-ded "Please allow me to go to the nearest post office so that I may f some one in London who will let my wife know I am safe," the constable Aerial activity in which two Zeppelins were brought down and more than two score of German, French and British aeroplanes met with diswere marched to the nearest detention er, landing in flames in an orchard less than thirty feet from a farmer's cottage. Two loud explosions follow-ed and then a flare of a few seconds duration. The airship commande marched the men to the farmer' house, but the occupants of the house were too frightened to answer back so the Germans took to the roa where they encountered the constable It is believed that engine trouble forced the descent of the Zeppelin.
