

Out in the Cold!

Salisbury's Government Will Ignore the Claims of Ireland.

The Old Methods of Coercion Likely to be Revived.

Gladstone's Sight and Hearing Failing. But His Will Power is Tremendous.

THE NEW COMMANDER.
London, June 30.—In its issue tomorrow the Chronicle will say that it is rumored that the Marquis of Lansdowne, the new Secretary of State for War, intends to make General Lord Roberts commander-in-chief of the army, ignoring Field Marshal Lord Wolseley, whom Mr. Campbell-Bannerman, the late War Minister, intended should have the position.

PLENTY OF MONEY.
London, June 30.—Within the past week the most ample pecuniary resources have been placed at the disposal of Lord Tweedmouth, who manages the electoral purse of the Liberal party. The fact that the Marquis is willing to subscribe to the campaign fund puts heart into the leaders, who are determined to make a good fight in a good cause.

THE G. O. M.
London, June 30.—Mr. Gladstone has remained a few days in London since his return from Kiel. He is closely guarded by his friends, and sees few people. His health is fairly good, but he suffers from imperfect hearing and failing sight. With the help of glasses he can still read, but he recognizes faces with difficulty. Rumors are constantly started that he will stand for Parliament, or at least take some part in the electoral struggle, but these are followed by authoritative denials. His will power is still tremendous, but his retirement from public life is final. Some Liberal journals are urging him to write a farewell address to the electors of Midlothian, if he cannot force himself to do anything more.

AN INFERNAL MACHINE.
Berlin, June 30.—A wooden case weighing 25 pounds arrived on Saturday night at the parcel office in Oranienburger-Strasse, this city, from Neustadt. The case was addressed to the chief executive of the police, General Krause. A liquid trucking from the bottom of the case aroused the suspicions of the officials. The bottom was loosened, when it was discovered that the liquid was benzine. The police were summoned, and they found that the case contained five litres of benzine in seven bottles, joined together with lint and connected with an alarm clock set at 10.30 o'clock. There was also in the case a five-chambered loaded revolver, the trigger of which was connected by a cord with the lid of the case and the clock. Thus at 10.30 o'clock, or upon removing the lid, there would have been an explosion. The police are searching for the sender of the infernal machine.

THE HONOR ROLL.
London, June 30.—The list of honors conferred by the Queen on the occasion of the retirement of the Rosebery Government has been published. Lord Houghton, the retiring Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, and Lord Carrington, the retiring Secretary of State for India, are the only ones who have been created barons. The following are created baronets: Sir Brougham Loch, recently Governor of Cape Colony; the Right Hon. Herbert Gardner, M.P., the retiring President of the Board of Agriculture; Mr. Sydney James Stern, M.P., and Mr. James Williamson, M.P.

The baronets include the Lord Mayor of London and Mr. Leyland, an ex-M.P.

THE RIGHT HON. HENRY FOWLER, Secretary of State for India in Lord Rosebery's Cabinet, is made a Knight Grand Commander Order of the Star of India; the Right Hon. H. Campbell-Bannerman, the retiring Secretary of State for War, a Knight Grand Cross Order of the Bath; and Mr. Giffen a Grand Commander of the same order.

OUT IN THE COLD.

Ireland Likely to Have a Poor Chance Under the New Administration.

London, June 30.—At 3.10 o'clock yesterday afternoon Salisbury Cabinet started from Paddington Station for Windsor to receive the seals of office. A large crowd had gathered at the station to witness the departure of the new Ministers and heartily cheered them.

The constitution of the Salisbury Cabinet, with the new Secretary for Ireland excluded, confirms the worst fears of the Irish Parliamentary party that the Government means to ignore the Irish claims and resort to the old methods of coercion. It is conceded that Earl Cadogan, the new Viceroy of Ireland, will be a brilliant society entertainer, but neither his presence nor that of Baron Ashbourne, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, in the Cabinet, can secure the people getting prompt or sufficient hearing from the Government.

Another dispatch says: The Irish party will appear in Parliament further divided, to face a Government more so powerful and compact than the Ministers will be able to treat the Irish vote with indifference.

The appointment of the Right Hon. Sir Matthew White-Ridley as Secretary of State for Home Affairs, succeeds Mr. Wm. Court-Gully in his position of Speaker of the House of Commons. The Liberal plan for the appointment of a committee to direct army affairs will now vanish into thin air. It is certain that with a Unionist Government the Duke of Connaught will be appointed to command-in-chief of the army. The Standard even goes so far as to hint that the retirement of the Duke of Cambridge, the present commander-in-chief, may be reversed.

The New York Tribune's correspondent, Mr. L. N. Ford, cables from London: "The Secretary for Ireland is not known this morning, but he will not be in the Cabinet, whoever he may be. Lord Cadogan and Ashbourne may be responsible for Irish administration and legislation, but the Secretaryship will be degraded by the loss of Cabinet rank, and the Irish members will be irritated by having only one Minister to worry in the Commons."

Harold Frederick cables the New York Times in regard to the elections in Ireland, I think, is all right. The result in Cork is not at all to be taken as showing a great growth in the Parnellite strength. Elsewhere in Ireland there will be Parnellite losses instead of gain, and sanguine Nationalists must not count on at least 55 seats to be won.

from the Tories and five from the Parnellites. There are also negotiations for a deal between the Nationalists and Parnellites to join in taking St. Stephen's Green, Dublin, away from the Tories. In any case, it seems beyond doubt that the Nationalists will return with increased ranks, and what is infinitely more to the point, it is tolerably certain that Healey will have a majority in that body.

There are eight peers in the Cabinet, and a ninth will be added by the election of Sir Henry James to the peerage. The Unionists are certainly standing by the House of Lords. The Unionists count confidently upon making heavy gains in Scotland and the metropolitan districts, but forecasts are of little value when the registers of the United Kingdom contain the names of over 6,000,000 voters.

The Labor party is very active, and the Liberals are threatened with serious divisions in the industrial centers. Ireland is a ferment of factional warfare. Mr. McCarthy has issued a judicious address and appealed earnestly for financial aid. Mr. Redmond's manifesto is an aggressive proclamation of war against both English parties.

To turn to the other side of the shield, people observe that there have been sixteen persons about its silver peers—put into the stop-gap Cabinet, but their attention is concentrated on two only—Chamberlain and Salisbury. Of the rest it may be said briefly that they embrace fevered deadheads than Tory Cabinets usually contain. Five of the old gang have been shelved—Rutland, Cranbrook, Knutsford, Matthews and Jackson—and that is some comfort. Balfour is the only one left, something of a cloud, in a popular sense. In troubled times like these he cuts a slender figure at best, beside the burly buccaneering form of his uncle. Moreover, he has just been publicly admonished about his important Tory magnates, and is much humbled. As to Chamberlain, the spectacle of him seated on a high bench in the Tory Cabinet is slowly soaking itself into the popular mind. When the process is completed a permanent change will have been wrought in English politics. A certain small number who followed him out of the Liberal party now decline to do so, and are returning to their allegiance. Others accept the situation dumbly without expressing delight either by gestures, and a great many old Tories are openly indignant at his presence with their Unionist comrades in their Cabinet. That this little band of Whig renegades, who contribute perhaps a twentieth of the votes, should get a quarter of the offices, seems to be playing it very low down.

At the Capital.

Something Definite Regarding Remedial Legislation Expected Tuesday.

(Specially telegraphed by our own Representative.)
Ottawa, June 30.—It is expected that some definite information will be given the House on Tuesday as to what the Government's intentions are regarding remedial legislation. A member of the Cabinet stated today that legislation would be brought down either from the Government benches or by some one on that side of the House. The bill that has been drafted is now in the hands of Mr. Oulmet, and as far as it is possible to learn it is the Ewart bill considerably modified. Major Sam Hughes has taken a determined stand against remedial legislation, and he claims there are enough members in the House holding the same views to make it warm for the Government if they attempt interference this session.

Mr. Weldon, M.P., contends that the Governor-General in Council in hearing and disposing of the appeal of Manitoba acted as a judicial and not as a political body. But when the argument was being heard on the last appeal to the judicial committee of the Privy Council, Lord Watson said: "I apprehend that the appeal to the Governor is an appeal to the Governor's discretion—it is a political, administrative appeal, and not a judicial appeal in any proper sense of the term, and in the same way after he has decided, the same latitude of discretion is given to the Dominion Parliament." Lord Macnaughton also said: "We are a judicial body, and he (the Governor-General) is not sitting as a judicial body."

Away for the Holiday.

Many of the Soldiers in Camp Leave the City.

Big Crowds Visit the White City on Sunday.

Divine Service Early on the Heights—Dissatisfaction at Being Compelled to Spend Monday Under Canvas.

Sunday in camp was a great day for the civilians. An invading party, thousands strong, from the city, stormed and captured the Heights without the least resistance from the red-coats, who welcomed them cordially and gave them the freedom of the White City. It was the first opportunity many of the citizens had to visit the camp. The heads of households took their wives and families, the future heads of households took their sweethearts, and men came singly and in battalions. By 3 o'clock the visiting tide had reached high water mark, and the volunteers were literally swamped by comparison. The weather was perfect. The civilians were interested in the soldiers and the soldiers were interested in the civilians. It was a good time to inspect camp life. The tents were thrown open and the illustrations of male household-keeping were highly entertaining to the ladies especially. The children found endless delight in the military trappings and accoutrements. Many of the volunteers slept, oblivious to their surroundings, and all were glad of an afternoon's respite from the hard and dull routine of the drill field.

A QUIET HOLIDAY.
Camp will be considerably thinned out today. The Essex battalion and band go to Chatham early; the Waterloo and Bruce bands have already gone to their respective counties to fill engagements; and many privates and officers have returned home for the holiday. There never was a time when the volunteers were so vexed and disappointed as at having to spend Dominion Day under canvas contrary to all expectations and arrangements. After first being called out at an early date and after preparing to spend the holiday at home, the grounds, which were cancelled to take effect a week later, so as to keep the men here on July 1. In the country districts men went to the railway stations at the original date, unaware of the change and they found themselves losing thus a day's time and a day's pay—so sudden, so unexpected and so unusual was the issue of the second order. In some battalions the men naturally rebelled and declined to come back, and in others they drafted a number of young recruits at the last moment in order to fill up the ranks. Under these circumstances it is certain that the camp will be quiet till Tuesday.

DIVINE SERVICES AT CAMP.
Shortly after 8 o'clock in the morning the brigade was called out for church parade. The various battalions were marched to the bluff overlooking the western end of the grounds, where a temporary pulpit had been erected. Around this the soldiers were clustered, and Rev. Canon Richardson, of the Memorial Church, promptly began the beautiful morning service of the Anglican Breviary, for his text, Ecclesiastes, xii, 13—"Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man." The discourse was short, but most pointed. First, reverence was made to the necessity for obedience to constituted authority, whether in military, civil, or in home life. "In these days," said the preacher, "it sometimes seems as if the word 'duty' had been changed to 'choice'." Then the chaplain pointed out with what readiness the true British soldier always responds to the call of duty, instancing the heroism of Horatio Nelson, of the Six Hundred at Balaklava, and other faithful servants of the nation. A tribute was also paid to the Seventh Battalion which, in 1885, was one of the first bodies of volunteers to offer their services to the Canadian Government. Canon Richardson expressed the belief that that men before him would be equally true to their country and ed up to defend her interests. There can be no true loyalty unless there is readiness for service. From service to the State, the chaplain turned to service to God, and pointed out that duty to the Creator demands constant war against the world, the flesh, and the devil.

While this portion of the service was in progress, the D. A. G., Col. Smith, ordered that the men be seated on the grass. It was a welcome command, for the men had been astir from early morning. The hymns were very appropriate. "Onward Christian Soldiers" and "Old Hundred" being the principal, and many of the volunteers joined in the singing. The Twenty-seventh Battalion Band furnished the instrumental music, and altogether the service was most impressive—the more so because it was bright and cheerful, and not tedious.

Capt. Sicklesteel, of Windsor, commanded the Roman Catholic volunteers in the camp. They marched down Fall Mall to St. Peter's Cathedral in time for High Mass at 10 o'clock.

INSPECTING THE LINES.
After church service, word went around that the D. A. G. would inspect the lines. The task occupied two and a half hours, and he visited every tent on the grounds. Forewarned was forearmed. Every man set to work, and his helmet was as clean, his belt as white, his tunic as spotless, his buttons as bright, his shoes a shiny, his pants as creaseless, his rifle as burnished, his attire as faultless, and his conduct as decorous as pipe-clay, elbow grease and a wholesome fear of the D. A. G. could make them. The youthful recruit shined his shoes until even they reflected his budding mustache. Here and there the practised eye of the D.

A. G. detected a flaw, and the careless one was reprimanded, but on the whole he was well pleased with the spick-and-shaven appearance of everything. The showing by the cavalry would have done credit to the regulars of any army.

BUGLE BLASTS.
Though the hour was early not a few civilians attended the church parade. The drill hours are longer this camp than they have ever been before. The Bruce Battalion Band is in great demand. It went home to honor an engagement at Walkerton today and had to decline a city offer. This is one of the best bands in the country. The field officer of today will be Major Hegler, of the Oxford Rifles. The Oxford band will play today. Next for duty, the Twenty-seventh, Lambton. The Essex men will return from Chatham at midnight tonight. The soldiers are glad there's something going on in the city today, and many will attend the Young Liberal Fleet demonstration.

TODAY'S CORNER-STONE LAYING.
Interesting Ceremony at Dundas Street Center Methodist Church.

The President of the London Conference Preached Yesterday.

Yesterday Rev. Dr. Williams, of Mitchell, who will participate in the ceremony of laying the corner stone of Dundas Street Center Methodist Church at 10 o'clock this morning, preached at both services of the congregation in the Collegiate Institute, being assisted by the Rev. Mr. Lancelley, the pastor. Despite the inconvenience arising from the burning down of their stated place of worship, the Dundas Street Center congregation has kept together loyally, and but the other Sunday the pastor communicated to them the gratifying intelligence that last year, numerically, financially, and in point of church work the church had made a decided advance on all previous years. In money over $11,000 was raised for all church purposes. These facts were especially gratifying to the president of the conference, who had listened to him at both services yesterday very large congregation. In the morning he took for his text Job xxxvi, verse: "Even so would he have removed thee out of the strait into a broad place, where there is no straitness." The preacher pointed out that in nature everything is in course of development; only in the grave is there uniformity. Yet there is many a man of whom it could be said: "He came; he stayed; he went." Men are made great alone by struggle. There can be no mental greatness without struggle. Theology has been developing. For eighteen centuries it only took command of God and man, the individual. Thank God it is not so narrow now. It takes in God, man, and man's brother. Theology said: "Build churches." Religion says: "Build men; save men." It rejoices in the church, but the beautiful church you are building will be dedicated not to theology, but to men. In conclusion, Dr. Williams said he rejoiced in the truth as taught by John Wesley, because he held that no creed except a sincere desire to flee from wrath to come was necessary to enter a church. Be earnest, thorough, Scriptural, he added with emphasis, but never be narrow.

Miss Robin sang the beautiful solo, "Lead Us Home in Safety."

In announcing that the collection was on behalf of the building fund, Rev. Mr. Lancelley said that 25 years ago, when the foundation stone of the burned down church was laid, $400 had been raised, but they were a small body then. Now they were a large and steadily increasing congregation. The Centennial Church was a child of theirs, and at present they have two mission churches in their care. Therefore, the collection should be very much larger.

Two Members of the Worcester Brigade Killed and Seven Injured.
