THE ONTARIO CAMPAIGN

Meeting in the Interest of Hon. John M. Gibson.

Elora's Armory Crowded to the Doors-Persons Who May or May Not Vote.

Elora, Ont., May 23.—A meeting in the interests of Hon. J. M. Gibson, the Liberal candidate for East Wellington, was held in Armory Hall, Elora, last night, when the following named gentlemen were present and addressed the electors: R. C. Clute, K.C., of Toronto; Mr. German, of Welland; W. H. Wardrope, of Hamilton, and Mr. Dillon, of Stratford. Mr. Gibson also spoke for a short time, though with difficulty, as he was suffering with throat trouble owing to the strain of the last few weeks.

The hall was crowded to the doors. SUIT FOR ALLEGED SLANDER. Herbert Lennox, of Aurora, Conservative candidate in North York, has issued a writ for $10,000 damages for slander against Perry Morton, of North Guillimbury. The suit arises out of reflections on Mr. Lennox's personal character al-

Incontrovertible Chemical Proof is Very Much Stronger Than the Opinions of Ignorant Merchants and Dealers.

If a merchant or a dealer tells you that a dye prepared for coloring allwool goods will successively color cotton goods, do not believe him. The person who makes such a statement is a stranger to the chemistry of dyes. Vegetable fibres, such as cotton and linens, require special dye to produce fast, clear and brilliant colors. The manufacturers of Diamond Dyes pre-pare sixteen special Cotton colors in addition to their large range of wool and silk colors. These special cotton colors are immensely popular with carpet, rug and mat makers. Rags, Good Wife Who Profited by an Un-warps and cotton and linen goods dyed with the Diamond Dye fast cotton colors stand sun and washing; these colors never fade or wash out. When you are about to dye cotton, linen or mixed goods, ask your merchant for Fast Diamond Dye Cotton colors; he should have the full range for your convenience. Thousands of Diamond Dye Mat and Rug Patterns are sold every week. If you have rags, old pieces of cloth or yarns, you should make up a handome floor rug. ICE MINES OF TORRID ARIZONA Nowhere in the world does there exist an industry so unique as that just being put in operation in Northern Arizona, where elaborate plans are being made to utilize the product of the ice caves in existence there. Strange, it seems, too, that in this land of great heat, where in some places ice is a priceless luxury, made so by excessive freight rates which prevail in the territories, man's in-genuity has not heretofore conceived the idea of the wholesale appropriation of the relief which nature has provided. Not until very recently has any attempt been made to take away the apparently inexhaustibe quantities of ice which have been found in caves near Flagstaff. Now, however, it is intended to literally mine or quarry the ice, and the promoters of the scheme declare it will prove a great profit producer from the very outset, as they expect to secure ice enough not only to supply the scores of small stations, towns and lumber camps in that vicinity, but to provide a supply for the railroads of Northern Arizona and New Mexico, even into California, as in the vast region of what was once the northern part of the great American desert ice factories have not as yet become common. Indeed, the fac-tories in Los Angeles, Phoenix, Albuquerque and Las Vegas have for years supplied most of the district with ice, although at prices that necessarily were prohibitive, made so by the long railway haul. The main, or best known, ice cave lies at the head of Clark's valley, 17 miles southwest of Flagstaff. Although others may be larger, they are not so accessible. A wagen road leads nearly to the cave, and the Arizona Lumber Company's railroad at one time passed near, but its route has since been changed. The people of the country think the cave was originally what is termed a "blow-out," that is, a volcano vent made by water or gas, during some convulsion of peture in the agrilar history. of nature, in the earlier history of the earth. There are many of these "blow-outs" of various sizes and extent scattered over Arizona.-Brook-

THE HIDDEN HOMES OF THE BIRDS

Thousands of Them Which Only the Falling of Leaves Lays Bare.

Many thousands of birds' nests are perched in the trees and shrubs of the great suburban parks and woodlands, and some thousands of persons visit those parks and woodlands every week. Yet very few of all those visitors ever see a bird's nest until the fall of the leaves has laid bare the secrets of the birds

My DYSPEPSIA CURE positively cures all forms of indigestion or stomach trouble. It rejuvenates worn-out stomachs. It builds up stomachs that have been weakened by powerfulcathartics and old-fashioned nostrums.

Manyon's Dyspepsia Cure corrects bicating of the stomach, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath, and all affections of the heart caused by indigestion, wind on the stomach, belching wind or sour food, bad taste, offensive breath, loss of appetite, faintness or weakness of the stomach, improper circulation, coated tongue, heart-burn or water-brash. His Headache Cure stops headache in 3 minutes. Munyon's Pile Ointment cures all forms of piles.

The conduct of the heart short when the consternation of the parents is pru-ful, and their courage astonishing.

The conduct of the brown thrasher when the nest is discovered is much the same.

It is usually in an inaccessible place, deep in the heart of a thick hedge, and protected by thorns. The birds almost fly in the face of the intruder, all the fly in the face of the intruder, all the while uttering the most plaintive cries. So, too, the wood thrush is full of uneasiness at the sight of an intruder near the nest. Both parent birds move about with the keen warning cry which they utter in time of danger. They are not so courageous as the cat bird and the brown thrasher, and seldom take a threatening attitude toward the stranger who peeps into the nest.

It is an interesting face that while the wood thrush chooses a high perch when singing, the nest is usually built low, below the height of the average man.

The female robin seems easily scared from her nest, whether she has eggs or young. A suburban robin family nesting this season in a peculiarly exposed spot left the nest time and again whenever any of their human neighbors tarried more than a minute or two near by, and always sat at a safe distance, without protest, when intruders climbed up to peep into the nest. It was noticed a year always sat at a safe distance, without protest, when intruders climbed up to peep into the nest. It was noticed a year ago in the same region that a robin whose nest was built in an exposed spot actually left her brood to perish of the cold and hunger when some workmen were occupied all day long near at hand. One of the rarest and most interesting sights in nature is the humming bird on her nest. It is exceedingly difficult to detect the nest, because it is very small, and because it simulates the appearance of the limb upon which it is built. It often looks like a moss-covered knot. It is a tiny cup, relatively deep, and well secured to the limb.

When the mother bird comes home and settles down, nothing of her is visible save the end of the tail, a bit of the head with the long, slender bill sticking up, and the specks of eyes glistening keenly as she watches for the approach of danger. As the tiny-winged jewel broods thus upon her pea-like eggs or her absurdly small birdlings, she seems the very embodiment of motherhood—New York Sun.

HOW SHE USED

[Chicago Daily News.] Mrs. Holden received a $50 check from an unexpected source, representing her share of property left by a deceased relative. It was a complete surprise. By mentally increased its purchasing power many times over. She fussed about that night in terror for fear the unindorsed check should be stolen, and in the morning vielded to Holden's suggestion that he cash it and keep the money till she decided what to do with it. "But I've already decided," she said.

"Don't you know, dear, how I've longed for a perfectly lovely china cabinet? I was looking at some only the other day, but I was afraid to speak to you about it. It's just what I want."

"Then get it," said Holden promptly. "Don't see why you should be csared anyway to tell me about a little simple thing like that."

"Oh, may I?" cried his wife. "You have no idea how it will improve the diningroom, and I do want it so. And you would really like it?"

"Yes, indeed," said Holden genially, and departed for the city.

Two nights later, when he came home, he found the cabinet and the bill.

"By the way," he said, "I meant to tell you to come by the office for your for a perfectly lovely china cabinet? I "By the way," he said, "I meant to tell you to come by the office for your money the other day."
"Oh, I just charged it, dear," said Mrs. Holden. And all was peace. Till the week following. Then Mrs. Holden spoke serenely one morning:
"You know, dear, I've been thinking

"I thought you got the cabinet with your $50," he said faintly.
"Why, you told me to go and get it," cried his wife. "You said you would like to have it, and that I should have told you before that I wanted it."
She was so palpably cut to the heart that Holden hastily relented. "All that Holden hastily relented. "All right," he said, soothingly. "Cut glass is good, and if you want it, get it. But you might as well go to Chrystal & Chrystal's to buy it. They owe me a bill of $68, and we'll try collecting it by jumping accounts." The next evening Holden was taken

"It cost a little over $50, dear," said Mrs. Holden, "but I asked the man just what the bill was that he owed you and bo the bill was that he owed you and bought exactly that amount. Isn't it lovely."
Hoiden calculated rapidly. He was out $18 on the glass bill, but at last his wife had spent her $50, so he was content. It was something of a shock, therefore, when Mrs. Holden, a few days later, broke a breakfast silence with the remark: "Dear, I do want some bookcases made into the library walls. I was talking to the cabinetmaker down yonder." She pointed vaguely. "He made estimates and everything, and can match She pointed vaguely. "He made estimates and everything, and can match the woods, and for one on either side of the fireplace he'll charge me only $50."
"Well, I don't known, now," said Holden, hesitatingly.
"Oh," she interrupted, "but it's my money, of course that pays for them."
"Say," said Holden, "didn't you buy that cut glass?"
"That was just jumping accounts, you said," she answered serenely.

"That was just jumping accounts, you said," she answered, serenely.

It ended in the cabinetmaker taking measurements. Holden discovered in him one who owed the firm a bill that would about cover the bookcases. For family peace it was cheap at the price, and the man got the job, which he did in a leisurely way and distinctly inferior manner. It was perhaps a fortnight after the cases were in that Holden came home to an excited wife, who waved before him some imposing papers and told an incoherent tale of an advertisement she had read of a gold mine out west, far out west, so wondrously full of promise that she had seen at last the place for her $50, and had promptly got in on the ground floor with ten shares at $5 a share. Holden read the circulars and the certificates with an inscrutable countenance. "Where did you get the money?" he asked.

"It was my $60" she said: "But I and the certificates with an inscritable countenance. "Where did you get the money?" he asked.
"It was my $50." she said: "But I wanted to surprise you, so I took it out of the menth's house money, and there's a little bill at the grocer's, but you won't mind that, will you, dear?"
"My dear," said Holden. "I don't mind the grocery bill nor the bookcases, in view of the fact that your $50 is at last irrevocably gone."

Remedy for All Weakness.

Dr. McLaughlin Gives His Reason for the Popularity of His Electric Belt.

Electricity, as furnished by my Belt, cures by giving back to the weakened nerves, muscles and organs the vitality they have lost, reducing inflammation, developing the full vigor of health and removing the effects of overwork, exposure to weather and long-continued sickness. You can be cured if you will grasp the opportunity. My Electric Belt has restored to health and strength thousands of nervous, debilitated and pain-worn men and women. It fills your nerves with electricity while you sleep. Its power goes into the body in a gentle stream, saturating every nerve and charging them with its vital element until they are as strong as steel.

The current supplied by my appliance enters the body in a glowing stream of vitalizing heat, so gentle that the nerves and vital organs absorb it as freely as a hungry babe drinks milk. This force is added to the natural power generated by the stomach; it saturates every vital part and soon transforms the debilitated body into a natural storage battery which generates its own health and closes the doors forever to disease and debility.

am an enthusiast, you say. Why should I not be? I have the gratitude of thousands of people who have been cured by my Electric Belt after the failure of the best physicians. I am enthusiastic, because I know that I relieve suffering humanity with the surest cure for the least expenditure of money that is known

I know there is no better way to prove my confidence in the wonderful curative power of my Belt than to cure you before I ask my pay for it, and as I do know that it will restore strength in every instance, I am willing to cure first and ask my pay afterwards. I will allow any man or woman who can offer me security to use it entirely at my risk. I take all the chances, and you can
