DOUBLE-FACED POLITICIANS.

The elasticity of Grit principles and the adaptability of the Grit policy cannot be sufficiently admired. It is now well known that the Grit policy on the school question has been twisted and turned in such a way that it has been made to suit any locality in which a Grit candidate presents himself for election. If a harvest of votes is to be gathered in Quebec the candidate and his friends represent themselves as strong advocates for "justice" to the Manitoba minority. If the scene of the candidate's operations is Victoria, B.C., the Grit policy presents a totally different aspect. Interference with Manitoba is there denounced in the strongest terms and the enthusiastic followers of Mr. Laurier.

CHAPTER IV. Finding a sheltered secret corner, we made a very hasty breakfast of these keeper, so we had not the face to chide and some mirth.

A drizzly rain falling and turning the snow into slush, we kept under the shelter of the shed, and this giving us scope Moll had stolen, and how willingly we would all have eaten a dinner got by was the case, for almost every the same means, I had to acknowledge diatribes against Great Britain and the cold, did make the design of Don Sanit appeared the night before, when I was warm and not exceedingly sober. and indeed toward dusk I came to re gard it as no bad thing at all.

Then in he goes to the house without a word, and now my worst fear was that he had thought better of his offer and would abandon it.

So there we hang about the best par tion of the United States was of an hour, now thinking the don would presently send for us and then growing in the cold forgotten, but in the end comes Master Landlord to tell us his worship in the cherry room would see us. So, after the same formalities of scarce necessary, for it needed no subtle observation to perceive that we would accept any conditions to get our share of that roast pig. This supper differed our Moll was taken with a kind of tickling at the throat which presently attracted our notice.

"What ails you, Molly, my dear?" asks Jack. "Has a bit of crackling gone down the wrong way?" She put it off as if she would have us take no notice of it, but it grew worse and worse toward the end of the meal and became a most horrid, tearing cough, which she did so natural as to deceive us all and put us in great concern, and especially Don Sanchez, who declared she must have taken a cold by being exposed all day to the damp

"If I have," says she very prettily, after wiping the tears from her upon another fit, "'tis surely a most ungrateful return for the kindness with which you sheltered me last night, senor."

"I shall take better care to shelter you in the future, my poor child," replies the don, ringing the bell. Then, the maid coming, he bids her warm a bed and prepare a hot posset against Moll was tucked up in the blankets. "And," says he, turning to Moll, "you shall not rise till noon, my dear. Your breakfast shall be brought to you in vonr room, where a fire shall be made and such treatment shown you as if you were my own child.

"Oh, what have I done that you should be so gentle to me?" exclaims Moll, smothering another cough. And with that she reaches out her leg under the table and fetches me a kick of the shin, looking all the while as pitiful and innocent as any painted picture. "Would it be well to fetch in a doctor?" says Don Sanchez, when Moll was gone barking up stairs. "The child looks delicate, though she eats with a fairly good appetite.' 'Tis nothing, you know." replies day or so, with proper care. 'Tis a kind of family complaint. I am taken that way at times." And with that he rasps his throat to tell that he would be none the worse for sleeping a night between sheets.

This was carrying the matter too far, and I thought it had certainly undone us, for stopping short, with a start, in and must be afoot early tomorrow, I will ring for a light to take you to bed.' So we up presently to a good snug room, with a bed to each of us fit for a prince. And there, with the blankets drawn up to our ears, we fell blessing our stars that we were now fairly out of our straits and after that to discuss. ing whether we should consult Moll's inclination to this business First Dawson was for telling her plump out all about our project, saying that, being sc young, she had no conscience to speak of and would like nothing better than to take part in any piece of mischief. But against this I protested, seeing that it would be dangerous to our design to let her know so much (she having a woman's tongue in her head), and also of a bad tendency to make her, as it were, at the very beginning of her life, a knowing active party to what looked like nothing more nor less than a fraud. Therefore I proposed we should, when necessary, tell her just so much of our plan as was expedient and no more. And his agreeing mightily, with Jack's natural turn for taking of short cuts out of difficulties, he fell in with my views at once, and so, bidding God bless me, was snoring the next minute. In the morning we found the don just as kind to us as the day before he had been careless and so made us eat breakfast with him, to our great content. Also he sent a maid up to Moll to inquire of her health and if she could eat any thing from our table, to which the baggage sends reply that she feels a little easier this morning and could fancy a 68 1/2 Yates St. dish of black puddings. These delicacies her father carried to her, being charged by the don to tell her that we should be gone for a couple of days, and that in our absence she might command whatever she felt was necessary to her complete recovery against our return. Then I told Don Sanchez how we had resolved to tell Moll no more of our purpose than was necessary for the moment, which pleased him, I thought, mightily, he saving that our success or failure depended upon secrecy as much as anything, for which reason he had kept us in the dark as much as ever it was possible.

he lays the clothes over his head and

About 8 o'clock three saddle nags were brought to the door, and we, mounting, set out for London, where we arrived about 10, the roads being fairly passable save in the marshy parts about Shoreditch, where the mire was knee deep; so to Gracious street, and there leaving our nags at the Turk inn we walked down to the bridge stairs. and thence with a pair of oars to Greenwich. Here, after our tedious chilly voyage, we were not ill pleased to see the inside of an inn once more, and Don Sanchez, taking us to the king's posting house, orders a fire to be lighted in a wivate room, and the best there was in the larder to be served us in the warm parlor. While we were at our trenchers Don Sanchez says:

"At 2 o'clock two men are coming hither to see me. One is a master mariner named Robert Evans, the other a merchant adventurer of his acquaintance NEW whom I have not yet seen. Now you are to mark these two men well, note all CROP they say and their manner of speaking for tomorrow you will have to personate these characters before one who would be only too glad to find you at fault." "Very good, senor," says Dawson,

'but which of these parts am I to play?' "That you may decide when you have seen the men, but I should say from my knowledge of Robert Evans that you may best represent his character. For in your parts today you are to be John and Christopher Knight, two ja27-2tw needy cousins of Lady Godwin, whose husband. Sir Richard Godwin, was lost at sea seven years ago. I doubt if you will have to do anything in these characters beyond looking eager and answering merely 'Yes' and 'No' to such questions as I may put.'

Thus primed, we went presently to the sitting room above, and the drawer shortly after coming to say that two gentlemen desired to see Don Sanchez, Jack and I seated ourselves side by side at a becoming distance from the don, holding our hats on our knees as humbly as may be.

Then in comes a rude, dirty fellow, with a patch over one eye and a most peculiar bearish gait, dressed in a rough coat, with a wool shawl about his neck, followed by a shrewd visaged little gentleman in a plain cloth suit, but of very good substance, he looking just as trim and well mannered as t'other was uncouth and rude.

"Well, here am I," says Evans, whom ve knew at once for the master mariner, flinging his hat and shawl in a corner. "There's his excellency Don Sanchez, and here's Mr. Hopkins, the merchant I spoke on yesterday. And who be these?" turning about to fix us with his one blue eye.

"Two gentlemen related to Mrs. Godwin and very anxious for her return,' replies the don.
