EDITOR'S MAIL

Campbellton, N. B.,

March 1, 1922.

Editor, Campbellton Graphic, Campbellton, N.B.

Dear Sir:

A great deal has been written in the past regarding the change in our New Brunswick Road Law. It would appear to the writer that with so many cars coming in from other parts of the Dominion that we should fall in line and turn to the right instead of to the left. Could not we revive the idea and have the change?

I wish to refer to a case I have in mind. So many people will say if you meet a car coming from the State of Maine or Quebec, if they insist on keeping to the right just stick to your own side. This is right and proper in New Brunswick and the foreign car will have to pay the damages. A certain farmer did not believe in changing the road law. He was driving to town and happened upon a short turn in the road to meet a motorist accustomed to turning to the right, assured that he was in his own province and following the rules of the road he stuck to his left side. The motorist could not stop in time to avert an accident, the farmer held his ground, he was perfectly right, but he is now dead and the motorist back on his own territory still living. Did it pay the farmer to stick to the New Brunswick Road Law? Yet, if he, at the last moment had turned to the right to save his life and then appeared in court he would have been equally guilty, and he held so by the courts of any country.

Many farmers are not opposed to the change. Yet, I am familiar with one up to date farmer who drives a white horse, who is opposed, and strongly so, to any change. I have repeatedly met this same gentleman and found he always takes the Safety

First side of the road, whether it be right or left, and when you are obliged to pass him it is the wheel track for him.

Why not have the law changed to conform with the rest of the continent. If Nova Scotia wishes to stand apart what of it. Let New Brunswick lead and Nova Scotia will quickly follow. Where are all our Auto Associations?

Yours,

9863.

The Thrill-a-Minute King
"HURRICANE HUTCH"

He dives from a precipice into the roaring rapids.
He leaps from one automobile into another, both going at a mile-a-minute speed.
He drops from a bridge onto the top of a moving automobile.

On a motorcycle he leaps across a broken bridge as a roaring locomotive steams underneath.
He walks the tight rope across a chasm.
He races a train on motorcycle and dashes in front of the locomotive.

He fights a shark under the water.
He makes a human bridge of his body to save a girl from a flaming building.
Hanging by his knees from an aeroplane he swings down and saves a girl from a motor boat.
