

CAMPBELLTON SCOTS CELEBRATE ST. ANDREW'S

Real jolly time at Princess Palm Room Last Thursday Evening—Program of High Order Rendered Good Speeches—Good Music.

Last Thursday night was a "brave night" in the Princess Palm Room here when the Caledonian Society of Restigouche celebrated with a turkey dinner the anniversary of Scotland's patron saint. A large representation of the local St. Andrew's Society was present together with many friends of the organization and the festival was replete with songs, speeches, numerous stories, Scottish reels and reminiscences both historical and personal. The speeches were colorful eulogiums of the Scottish race and glowing tributes to the land of the heather, flavored always with snatches of Scottish wit. A splendid musical programme was provided for the occasion. Piper Harry McLennan was on hand and the resonant strains of the pipes stirred the large gathering perceptibly and evoked prolonged choruses of merited applause. Two members of the Palm Room Orchestra did themselves full justice at piano and drums, while Mr. Arch. McEachern of Chatham supplied numerous selections on the violin. Mr. Mc-

Eachern, who is an artist of no mean ability, appeared to be in his best form and injected in these selections a true Scotch rhythm that won pleased smiles from the most staid and sober Scotchmen present. The dinner itself was a faultless spread and speaks well for the new management of the Princess. Much credit is also due Mrs. Edward Alexander who tastefully arranged and decorated the tables for the host of diners, thereby contributing very appreciably to the unalloyed success of this annual event. After the winner had been disposed of the assemblage was called to order by the new president, John Bissett, who made brief but appropriate remarks. He then proposed the King's health and this was responded to with the National Anthem. After a brief and fitting address by the president a toast was drunk to the society. Greetings from kindred societies in other places and the replies sent out were then read. In proposing the toast to "The Day We Honor", H. A. Carr made a speech which rivaled any of the evening. In responding R. B. Rosborough rose to the occasion in an admirable manner, giving a short address full of good thoughts. He spoke of ideals and declared that, in order to get the best out of life it was necessary to have ideals and live up to them. The speaker also paid a tribute to Scottish patriotism and expressed himself in believing that without patriotism we cannot build a nation nor produce a race worth-while. He also spoke in glowing terms of our national pride of race and expressed the hope that all Canadians will always seek to perpetuate the glorious traditions of the Scotch. At this point of the programme solos by Messrs. H. V. Musgrave and H. B. LeRoy delighted the gathering. Dr. D. Murray proposed the toast to "Our Country" and performed the duty in his usual satisfactory way. In closing his remarks he assumed a deep sobriety of mind and cautioned all who desired to be law-abiding citizens to drive to the right on their way home. W. F. Vorstan, Chaplain of the society responded to the toast with a fitting speech. He recalled famous tales of Scottish courage and chivalry and of their prominent part in the making of history. With this he linked the history of Scotch pioneers in early Canada and of this country's present fame won a Vimy Ridge by descendants of those hardy, fearless pioneers. In words pregnant with patriotism the speaker pleaded for all to lend their aid to make Canada a nation that we can be justly proud of and worthy of the sacrifices that have been made for her. The speaker ended his remarks with fitting verses of a patriotic nature. This was followed by appropriate pieces by the orchestra. "O Canada" and "The Red White and Blue" were rendered in admirable style. In proposing a toast to "Our Friends Across the Border," H. F. McLatchey made a suitable speech. He reminded the gathering that the life and progress of Canada and the United States are inseparably woven together both industrially and socially. Each country has received money and material from the other until now these two progressive young nations both descendants of a great Mother Country are progressing virtually hand in hand. The speaker declared that for these reasons this toast ought to be heartily drunk. Mr. A. A. Barry, American Consul here, responded to the toast with fitting words of appreciation. He declared that the spirit of hospitality and kindness is shown wherever Scotch folk meet, and extended the goodwill and friendship of his brothers across the lines. A vocal selection by Mr. F. C. Schurman was the next feature of the evening, and was a number which won much applause. Rollitiking Scotch selections on the violin followed and added much to the gaiety of the hour. Following these came a lengthy recitation on numerous subjects of local interest by H. R. Smith, who was in his most jovial mood. After keeping the assemblage in a high state of excitement for some time, Mr. Smith closed by giving some advice to members of the medical profession on how to collect uncertain bills. In proposing a toast to "Our Town" D. A. Stewart, the vice-president of the society, took a retrospective glance of the history of the town and touched on the principal points of progress during past years, and spoke optimistically of the outlook for the future. In closing he advocated a town club for men which he felt to be a necessity to the social life of the men of the community. In responding to this toast His Worship Mayor McKay paid a glowing tribute to Campbellton and its citizens and declared that we have every reason to be proud of the town in which we live. Touching on various phases of local government he showed that all problems were being coped with in a satisfactory and beneficial way and spoke in hopeful terms of the town's promise of advance and growth in the future. In closing he reminded the gathering that a good town was even more desirable than a big town or a busy town and declared that this resolution was the sentiment of the citizens. Although time had now progressed into the wee sma' hours, President Bissett requested a tune of the pipes and Piper McLennan responded with true Scotch graciousness, after which the gathering formed a huge circle and sang Auld Lang Syne. The National Anthem completed the programme. The assemblage then broke all present feeling that the occasion had been a memorable success.

GUARDING NOAH'S ARK

Watched Night and Day, a Mate in Progress in Cairo. Whether one believes in Noah's Ark or not, there is a bit of it called up on the inner wall of the Jewish synagogue in Cairo, Egypt, at all the travelers' guides advise. This precious bit of splintered wood, several square feet in extent, is kept day by day, but at night, the wipers across like the precaution against thieves that doubtless will guard to eight. Travelers from all over the world stand in awe, more or less, and listen to the legends of the ark being told by the official guide to the temple. It is a splendid, if unconvincing, relic, and well worth the money one is bound to give to see the beginning of the ark. The bit of Ark actually looks like a piece of fractured timber taken from one of the old sailing vessels. It has certainly not the dignified appearance which one might expect from so ancient and historic a landmark in human history. It might be any odd bit of wood, splintered and made to look old—perhaps it is! When one looks at it, it is not so much a question of believing, but of pretending to believe. The visitors who come to view this relic are numbered in thousands every year. Each one gives a small contribution towards the upkeep of this ancient showpiece, to say nothing of the tips demanded by the numerous interpreters of history, politics, Arab, and street loungers, who demand some small coin before they will divert their unwelcome attentions to other victims. Altogether, guarding this bit of Noah's Ark is quite a profitable business, and it is certain the guards would fall asleep if sufficiently bribed, so as to enable the overzealous tourist to take back a chip of the Ark to show his family. It is recorded that an Australian soldier during the war badly wanted to take a cutting from the splintered relic. The guards refused, and made some demonstration of protest; but on being shown a bayonet in one hand and some money in the other, they became diplomatic and left the memory of Noah to the jackknives of the Australian Tommy. Before Man Came. The land vertebrates of the era were amphibious animals, half reptiles, half fish. Bones and skeletons of the crocodiles, the largest and best known of these animals in America, are occasionally found in Pennsylvania, but the best specimens are from Texas. The crocodiles are twice as old as the earliest known remains of man. It has been said of the crocodiles that he is a collateral ancestor of all the higher animals—of reptiles, birds, mammals and of man himself—all developed, through the ages which have since elapsed, from animals of the same type and grade of organization.
