THE VILLAGE GRAVETARD BY MES. M. C. GARDNER

Scower, sai and slowly, Down the ellent way, Mong the graves so lowir. With affection hely, Do the mourners stray.

Mute is all the music Of the cloudless morn: Bells, erst chiming gladly. Now are tolling radly, " Gone, forever gone Down the ellent alleys. Mong the humble dead Mid the findly cherlib'd, Ah I so early perish'd ! Do the mourners tread

Little graves just swelling From the earth's green breast, Silently are telling Of the quiet dwelling Where we all must rest.

And the sunshine lightly Gilds each little bed Jung birds carol sprightly. Aweet flowers open brightly, By the early dead.

Costly, sculptured marble, Carved and chisel'd stone, Raised by love or duty, In their cold, and beauty, Tell what death bath done.

Tell of early manhood Stricken in its prime : Of the hoary headed, Of the newly wedded, Known no more in time.

Shadows dark and mournful Wrap us as we go: Hollow scem the treasures. Phantom-like the pleasures Uf this world of wo.

So we nasten beavenward, Fleetly as we may: Speeding upward ever. In our progress never Lingering by the way.

Notes Nosita, dated the 20th August, 1834.

greatest torture with this distressing complaint; was tap them for four weeks, I feit much better, and by perserving with them, at the expiration of two months, I was completely cased. I have since enjoyed the best of health
