

13. Fire resistance of protected metal sections

In this study, the behaviour of different protectives used in the previous study is examined with reference to the effect of time and aging; the protectives used should continue to be effective during a fire, even many years after the building is put into use.