

would be one hundred acres of land under good fence, at the Little Turtle's Town, (eighteen miles north of Dennis's Station) by the first of the Sixth Month, where they had also obtained a large number of hogs, and some cows, and he doubts not, but that the Indians will soon see, that it is easier to raise food, than to procure it by hunting," and "adds, "Friends may see, from the great progress they have made in civilization, since PHILIP DENNIS was with them, that they only want good and suitable men to reside amongst them, and teach them how to work."*

* Since this narrative was prepared for publication, a letter has been received from the agent at Fort Wayne, dated the fifth of the Tenth month 1805, in which he says, "agreeably to the directions of the committee, I have employed a man to assist the Indians in cultivating the field, on the Wabash, which was cleared and cultivated by PHILIP DENNIS, last year; the Indians with this man's assistance have raised, it is supposed, at least six hundred bushels of good corn, from this one field, exclusive of what they have raised from ground of their own clearing.

Many of the oldest of the Eel River and Weas Indians have removed and settled at that place, where they will be followed by the younger branches of their tribes in the ensuing spring."

He adds, "believing as I do, that the society of Friends are desirous of ameliorating the situation of their Red Brethren in this country, I will take the liberty to observe, that the present is a very favourable time, to put in execution their benevolent views, towards the distressed natives of this land, and that
