

community in a very nara of the domestic count of revenue col-system will have to be its use is a reason for a combination of in-ount of revenue from ee, 816; carried, 816;

that the Government f the compromise in nction of drawbacks ond and failure, 817;
e bounty to the fish-ner remarks, 817.

he credit of the Gov-measures forced upon e opposition, and the these measures, the of the surplus revenue, ne to the States, 418;
ee in this calamitous thors of the measure, d, 414; vetoed, 414;

rable condition of the Fillmore on the can-cock, even temporarily, erts that the land disurt of the compromise

415; remarks of Car-to the first, passed and Committee of Thirteen, 416; the compromise the stumbling-blocks,
; manner in which it

resident, 723; elected, abinet, —; his message,
; the claim of Texas, ries, 741; reference to uba, 741; denunciation death, 765; first Pres-rely military, 765; dethe Texas boundary, 765.

lication of that repub-94; Texas was at war to annex the war, 94; eson in favor of the treaty, 94; remarks of by Texas, 95; all hosreds Mexico disavowed, erlight, 95; a mistake eed there is a sort of from the nature of ion, 96; there is no osition for annexation as obstacle in point of ion laid on the table, er of Mr. Gilmer, in a mediate annexation as of Great Britain, 681; ns, 581; nothing in the

in a prime mover, 581;
of Mr. Calhoun in the
r. Calhoun suspected, er inflexibly opposed accosting of Aaron V. Brown, 589; reply of Senator Benton, 589.

Letter from General Jackson in the Richmond Enquirer, 588; history of this letter, 588; Calhoun a candidate for the Presidency in 1841-2, 588; annexation the issue, 588; importance of the favor of General Jackson to secure the success of the scheme, 588; manner of approaching him, 588; its success, 584; mediums of transmission of Gilmer's letter, 584; Jackson's answer sent to Brown, 584; delivered to Gilmer, 584; his expressions in the capitol, 584; the state of the game, 584; object now to gain time before the meeting of the convention, 585; the Whigs inclined to postpone their convention, 585; discovery of the movements, 586; denounced, 588; explosion of the great gun on board the Princeton, 586; the publication of Jackson's letter with change of date, 587; interrogation of the candidates, 587; reply of Van Buren, 587; position of Calhoun, 587; position of Mr.
Clay, 587; steps taken to obtain Van Buren's answer, 588; necessity to obtain something from London to bolster up the accusation of that formidable abolition plot which Great Britain was hatching, 589; the manner in which it was accomplished, 589; Calhoun's letter to Lord Aberdeen, 589; annexation conducted with a double aspect, 590; failure of the annexation intrigue for the Presidency, 590; further developments, 590; position of the candidates, 590. See Democratic Convention.

Secret Negotiation.—A paragraph in the President's message, 599; intended to break the way for the production of a treaty of annexation covertly conceived and carried on with all the features of an intrigue, 600; its adoption to be forced for the purpose of increasing the area of slavery, or to make its rejection a cause of dis-union, 600; the scheme presents one of the most instructive lessons of the workings of our government, 600; early views of Mr. Calhoun contrasted with his later ones, 600.

Speech of Senator Benton, 600; "a map and memoir sent to the Senate, 600; let us look at our new and important proposed acquisitions, 601; a treaty in all that relates to the Rio Grande is an act of unparalleled outrage on Mexico, 602; the President says we have acquired a title by his signature to the treaty, wanting only the action of the Senate to perfect it, 602; war with Mexico is a design and an object with it from the beginning, 602; another evidence the letter of the present Secretary of State to Mr. Green, 602; the war is begun, 603; and by orders issued from the President, 603; the unconstitutionality of the war with Mexico, 603; its injustice, 603, this movement founded on a weak and groundless pretext, 604; resolution relative to the author of a private letter, 605; the letter of the Secretary of State to Mr. Murphy, 605; commencement of the plan, 606; details in its progress, 605, 607; treaty sent to the Senate and delayed forty days, 606; reasons, 608; the messenger to Mexico, 609; instructions, 609, 610; disavowal of Great Britain of all designs against slavery in Texas, 611; Southern men deprived us of Texas and made it non-slaveholding in 1819, 612; object of Mr.
Tyler," 618.

Texas or Disunion.—The projected convention at Nashville, 618; a strange collection anticipated, 618; what if disunion should appear there, 618; nullification and disunion are revived, and revived under circumstances which menace more danger than ever, 614; intrigue and speculation co-operate, but disunion is at the bottom, 614; secession is the more cunning method of dissolving the Union, 614; the intrigue for the Presidency was the first act of the drama, the dissolution of the Union the second, 616; the rejected treaty compared to the slain Caesar, 615; the lesson of history, 615; all elective governments must fall unless elections can be taken out of the hands of politicians and restored to the people, 616.

Violent Demonstrations in the South.—Soon as the treaty was rejected and the nominating convention had acted, the disunion aspect manifested itself, 616; the meeting at Ashley, in Barnwell district, 616; views of the meeting, 616; resolutions, 617; meeting at Beaufort, 617; resolutions, 617; meeting in Williamsburg district, S. C., 617; Texas or disunion the standing toast, 617; general convention at Richmond and at Nashville spoken of, 617; repelled by citizens of those cities, 617; counter meeting at Nashville, 617; resolutions, 618; the movement brought to a stand, its leaders paralyzed, and the disunion scheme suppressed for the time, 618.

Rejection of the Treaty.—Rejected by a vote of two to one against it, 619; the vote, 619; annexation desirable, 619; bill introduced by Mr. Benton to authorize the President to open negotiations with Mexico and Texas, 619; speech, 619; an honest mass desire to get back Texas, 620; the wantonness of getting up a quarrel with Great Britain exposed, 620; the course of Mr.
Calhoun, 621; the folly of any apprehension shown by the interest which Great Britain has in the commerce of Mexico, 621; the magnitude and importance of our growing trade with Mexico, the certainty that her carrying trade will fall into our hands, &c., are reasons for the cultivation of peace with her, 621; political and social considerations and a regard for the character of republican government, were solid reasons for the annexation without breaking peace with Mexico, 622; remarks on the course of annexation, 622; resolutions offered by Mr. Benton, 623, 624.

Legislative admission of.—Words of the joint resolution, 632; the anomaly presenting free and slave territory in the same State, 632; passed, 633; members from both sections voted for these resolutions, and thereby asserted the right of Congress to legislate on slavery in territories, 633; resolutions sent to the Senate, 633; gratification of Mr. Buchanan with them, 633; his remarks, 633; the Missouri Compromise line, 633; solid ground upon which the Union rested, 634; Mr. Bon-ton's bill, 634; his remarks on the bill, 634; the joint resolution from the House and the bill of the Senate combined, and the President authorized to act under them as he thought best, 635; Missouri Compromise reaffirmed, 636; astonishment of Congress to hear that Tyler had undertaken the execution of the act, 636; views and purposes of President Polk, 636; statement of Mr. Tappan, 636; statement of Mr. Blair, 637; the possibility that Mr. Calhoun would cause Mr. Tyler to undertake the execution of the act repulsed as an impossible infamy, 633; remarks of Senators, 633; the results, 633.

Thirty Years' View.—Concluding remarks, 757.

THOMAS, FRANCIS, on the Pension act of 1857, 269.

THOMPSON, R. W., reply to Mr. Cushing, 503.

TRIST, NICHOLAS P., Commissioner to Mexico, 704.

TYLER, JOHN, candidate for the Vice-Presidency, 804.

Administration.—His absence in Virginia, 211; interregnum in the government, 211; repairs to Washington, takes the oath and reappoints the Cabinet, 211; address in the nature of an inaugural lesson, 211; remarks on his predecessor, 211; two blemishes seen in the paragraph, 212; other points of bad taste, 212; another extract, 212; remarks, 212; extract relative to a