Trust for Trust.

Bu A. J. Barrowcliffe, Author of "Amberhill."

Three volumes.

"It is seldom we find, even in this great age of novel writing, so much that is pleasant and so little to object to as in 'Trust for Trust.' It con-bins much original thought and fresh humour."

The story is admirably developed. The interest never flags, the incidents are natural without being commonplace, and the men and woman talk and act like human beings."—Press.

Ellen Raymond;

Or, Ups and Downs. By Mrs. Vidal,

Author of "Tales for the Bush." &c.

Three volumes.

"The characters are good, the style pure, correct, brisk, and easy."—Fress,
"Mrs. Vidal displays resource, imagination, and power in no common degree. * * There is more power and strength put forth in 'Ellen Raymond' than perhaps in any lady's hook of this generation."—Saturday Review.

This novel will find a great many admirers."

THE

Dennes of Daundelvonn.

Bu Mrs. Charles J. Probu. Three volumes.

"This is a novel of more than average merit. There is considerable knowledge of character, power of description, and quiet social satire, exhibited in its pages."—Press.

"The Dennes of Daundelyonn' is a very readable book, and will be immensely popular.

I has many beauties which deservedly recommend it to the novel reader."—Critic.

The Two Homes.

By the Author of "The Heir of Vallis."

Three volumes.

"There is a great deal that is very good in this book—a great deal of good feeling and excellent design. "There are some good pictures of Madeira, and of life and society there; and there are exidences of much painstaking and taient."

are evidences or much painstaking and choic.—
Atheneum.

"The Two Homes' is a very clever novel.
Madeira furnishos Mr. Mathewa with a fertile theme for his descriptive powers. The dialogue is good: the characters all speak and not consistently with their natures,"—Leadler.

The Moors and the Fens.

By F. G. Trafford.

Three volumes.

"This novel stands out much in the same way that Jame Eyre' did. . The characters are drawn by a mind which can realize fictious characters with minute intensity."—Saturday Review.

It is seldom that a first fiction is entitled to such applicate as is "The Moora and the Fera," and we shall look anxiously for the writer's next essay."—Critic.

Lost and Won.

By Georgiana M. Craik. Author of "Riverston."

One volume. Second Edition.

One volume. Second Edition.

"Nothing superior to this novel has appeared during the present season."—Leader.

"Miss Craik's new story is a good one and in point of ability above the average of ladies' novels."

"The language is good, the narrative apprited, the characters are fairly delineated, and the dialogue has considerable dramatic force."—Suturday Review.

"This is not improvement on Miss Craik's first work. The story is more compact and more interesting."—Athenæum.

An Old Debt.

By Florence Dawson.

Two volumes.

"A powerfully written novel; one of the heat which has recently proceeded from a female hand has recently for the female from the female from the female from the common head of novels. Itselves vigour sometimes recals Miss Bronte, but in some respects Miss Fiorence Dawson is decidedly superior to the anthor of 'Jame Eyre.'"—Saturday Review.
"This novel is written with great care and painstaking; it evinces considerable powers of reflection. The style is good, and the author possesses the power of depicting emotion."—Athennum.

A very good seasonable novel."-Leader.

My Lady. A Tale of Modern Life.

Two volumes.

"'My Lady' is a fine specimen of an English matron, exhibiting that union of strength and gentleness, of common sense and romance, of energy and grace, which nearly approaches our ident of womanhood."—Press,
"'My Lady' evinces charming feeling and delicacy of touch. It is a novel that will be read with interest."—Athensem.

"The story is told throughout with great strength of feeling, is well written, and has a plot which is by no means common-place."—Examiner.

"There is some force and a good deal of freshiness in "My Lady." The characters are distinctly ilrawn, and often wear an an arranee of intividuality, or almost personality. The execution is the not in every rower of the property of the property of the property of the property in the which has sensibility rather than poetry; but which has sensibility rather than poetry; but which has sensibility rather than poetry; but which is also most subtly and searchingly powerful."—Dublin University Magazine.

Gaston Bligh.

By L. S. Lavenu, Author of "Erlesmere."

Two volumes.

"The story is told with great power; the whole book sparkles with espri; and the cimracters talk the gentlemen and lades. It is very enjoyning reading."—Press is a good story, admirably told, full of stirring incident, sustaining to the close the interest of a very ingenious plot, and abounding in clever sketches of character. It sparkles with wit, and will reward perusul."—Critic.
