THE WORLD'S HOME MAGAZINE FOR WOMEN Edited by LAURA L. E. McCULLY, B.A.

Dressmakers.

Apparently the dressmaking woman is increasing in this country on an average of about 5000 every year, writes Ray mond in The Chicago Tribune. This is not as large a ratio of increase as might have been expected. The managers of large dry goods stores have told me that there is a distinct tendiency among women nowadays to go to these establishments in preference to the humbler private dress-

The workers for the big stores are generally classed as sewing women and not as dressmakers. Their numpers increase almost exactly in pro-portion to the increase of population, but the woman of fashion seems to be going more and more to the large establishment. The reason for this is not so hard to discover. The big stores are organ-ized on a basis which enables them to give the maximum amount of work at the minimum of price. They buy ma-terials and findings in large quantities and are enabled to dispose of them to their customers on a basis of profit which would be impossible to the private dressmaker. They have facilities for crowding the work and are much more reliable in the matter of time than the average individual woman.

The dressmaker is not being driven out of business by any manner of the country.

I have previously called attention to the fact that there are to-day in the single City of Chicago upwards of 15,-000 dressmakers. As a dress of soft white silk eolienne, with model for separate skirt, this one for It is worth while noticing, however, that there has been an extraordinary increase in the number of colored women who have taken up dressmaking as a means of employment. Whether this comes from an increase in the wealth of their own race or whether the negroes are developing a genius for tailoring remains to be seen, but it is nevertheless a fact that while in 1890 only 7543 negro women were put down as dressmakers there were in 1900 12, as dressmakers of negro blood.
