ON DUNDONALD'S RECALL.

The Queen's jubilee. He was willing to take everything going on a free pass, but when the war broke out in South Africa, where the gallant member for Haldimand, did he join the member for North York in going to the defence of the empire? There were those who said that on the occasion of that crisis the member for Haldimand was under the bell. When there was a dress parade at the coronation Col. Thompson was on hand. "He's always loyal when there's a show," said Dr. Sprague.

The doctor asserted that the British government had been led by Mr. Leveson and others to believe that there were more politics at the bottom of the demonstrations in Canada than resentment at the ill-treatment of Lord Dundonald.

Judge Taschereau's assertion that only a few Scotchmen were at the back of the demonstration was another example of the attempt to mislead the British government and people. Lord Dundonald, a man of honor and high repute, had been maligned and abused, yet when he attempted to say a word in his own defence he was denounced by the government and its supporters as a person who should not be allowed in decent society.

Mean and Unfair.

"It was mean and unfair," Dr. Sprague continued, to make the accusation that Lord Dundonald had evicted antipathy towards the French race. It was untrue. Lord Dundonald had done nothing of the kind, and was left for a member of the government to make that assertion without any proof to offer in support of it. Every minister was to-day denying the right to the front when he should have acted with more prudence. His speech at the time of the demonstration was a coup de grace and he paid for it by dismissal from office. He, however, will remain in the house of commons as an honest man who will leave behind him the most excellent souvenir of the Canadian government.

After paying high tribute to the Laurier government, Frank Oliver of Alberta proceeded to denounce Lord Dundonald. He said that he could not expect to be protected under the mantle of the honorable lineage and at the same time play the part of a party hack for the Conservative Party.

This reference to Lord Dundonald was greeted with cries of "Shame" from the opposition. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself," said Col. Tisdale.

"All right," said Mr. Oliver. He went on to defend the minister of agriculture in the latter's differences with Lord Dundonald. He said that Lord Dundonald was guilty of a breach of faith in giving what was understood to be a non-political event a distinct political color. He did not think the British government was the least bit interested in the matter of Lord Dundonald, but he thought the minister of agriculture was a soldier of fortune and picked up a command after he got there.

Col. Ward of East Durham said that every reform in the militia was instituted by Lord Dundonald. He recalled the declaration by Sir Frederick Borden at the Groulx dinner in Montreal a few years ago, that he would not permit political interference with the militia even for his colleagues. Col. Ward regretted that Sir Frederick had departed from this high resolve, but ventured the opinion that had the minister of militia been at home during the organization of the 13th Dragoons this would not have occurred.

Sure, Barker is Right.

Mr. Barker of Hamilton put it that it was not the Dundonalds who were before the country, but the question of the militia. What the Conservative party criticized was the interference of the minister of agriculture with a fair, an honorable gentleman, who, not content with the share, wanted to wield the sword as well. All this was a political game, an undertaking to interfere with the organization of the 13th Scottish Dragoons, and the minister of militia seemed to have got conveniently out of the way to give Mr. Fisher a hand to fix the organization of that regiment. If Lord Dundonald had committed indiscretion, if it was an indiscretion that would result in good, it was an indiscretion to hear the Liberal bulk of the Conservatives exploiting Lord Dundonald for political purposes. Who, he asked, had looked up The Globe with information that enabled that paper to charge that Lord Dundonald contemplated millions of expenditure? The answer showed who was exploiting the Dundonalds for political purposes, and that was not the Conservative party. Was Lord Dundonald to be silent at Toronto? If he had been exulted and claimed that he had no answer to make, and did not dare to speak.

Col. Porter denounced the un-British-like conduct of the government in condemning Lord Dundonald without giving him an opportunity to be heard in his own defence. But the name of Lord Dundonald would be held in honor and reverence in Canada and throughout the British empire long after the name of the government had gone down in disgrace. He contrasted the dismissal of Lord Dundonald for an indiscretion with the governments' ill-treatment of the French race, and he contrasted the honor of the character of the imperial service with the dirty political service which Preston had been given a position of emolument.

TARTE ON THE MATTER.

Montreal, July 20.—(Special).—When, and in what manner, did Lord Dundonald ever cause offence to the French Canadians? On the contrary, Lord Dundonald is very popular with the French-Canadian nation. He has always acted towards them with the greatest possible liberality and no one can charge him with a single act of injustice.

Hon. J. Israel Tarte, the ex-minister of public works, in a very strong article in La Patrie this evening declared: "Not a question of religion or nationality, but a question of honor, which has just taken place in the British parliament more reveals the English touching ignorance exists in England touching Canada and the English government, in inviting Lord Dundonald to return home, has acted in the spirit which has dictated our suggestions all along. It sees without saying so, that Lord Dundonald formed the resolution to retire from the British army it would be his absolute right to become a political arena in Canada and become a candidate for the house of commons. Was it not a folly to say, as Mr. Lloyd George, that Lord Dundonald's conduct was of a nature to create a conflict between the two races in our country? No, there is no question of race in this case. It is a question of honor, and those who seek to create a conflict between the races are interested agitators or are guided by complete ignorance of the situation."

Lord Dundonald's fault was that he lacked discretion as a soldier and as a diplomat. He is a soldier and he has acted like a soldier. He has acted with more prudence. His speech at the time of the demonstration was a coup de grace and he paid for it by dismissal from office. He, however, will remain in the house of commons as an honest man who will leave behind him the most excellent souvenir of the Canadian government.

Toronto, but my letter has just missed the train. I have to explain to committee and beg them to accept the assurance of my deep and heartfelt thanks.

A committee was appointed to draft a letter to Lord Dundonald for his kind expressions.

Their was some discussion on the apparent misrepresentation which had been made in the press and by the speakers in the imperial house of commons with respect to the political character of the meeting in Massey Hall. It was decided to take no action.

A special committee was appointed to study the effect of the demonstration on Lord Dundonald and to co-operate with committees in other places, and to advise the government.

There was also a committee of R. J. Christie, D. M. Robertson, Melville-Boulton and C. O. Knowles.

GROGERS SEE GOVERNMENT.

Ottawa, July 20.—A deputation of leading wholesale grocers of Canada, headed by Mr. J. H. Grocers, waited upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. Mr. Fielding and Hon. Mr. Brodeur this afternoon to protest against the proposed legislation prohibiting any tobacco manufacturer making an exclusive contract with a wholesale merchant for the handling of his goods.

Mr. Bristol of Hamilton explained the object of the deputation. He said these were now going along satisfactorily as between manufacturer and dealer. The dealer was to remain as they were. Any change such as that proposed would be injurious to the grocers, in that it would deprive them of the business which they had built up. He said that the proposed legislation would be a blow to the tobacco trade in Canada, and that it would be a blow to the grocers, who were the mainstay of the tobacco trade. He said that the proposed legislation would be a blow to the tobacco trade in Canada, and that it would be a blow to the grocers, who were the mainstay of the tobacco trade.

Mr. Cote, Montreal, gave an address in French, endorsing the remarks of Mr. Grocers. He was followed by Hugh Blair, Toronto, who warned the government that they would get themselves into a bad position if they went into the business of interfering with the tobacco trade. He said that the tobacco trade was a business of great importance to the country, and that it was a business which had been built up by the grocers, who were the mainstay of the tobacco trade.

After some other members of the deputation had spoken, the matter was referred to the committee for consideration, reminding them that the same matter had been referred to them by the manufacturers of tobacco.

HOSPITAL WORK IN CHINA
EARLY PREJUDICE OVERCOME

Dr. Ewan Back in the City After Year's Hard Work at Chentu.

Under the green trees near Victoria College last night the members of the Methodist summer school and their friends formed a large audience, over which Principal Riddell of Alberta College, Edmonton, presided. Among other speakers was John Wakefield, who pointed to Dr. Ewan Wakefield in the audience as having laid his hand on his head and bidden him go to the mission work.

Just arrived from China, and somewhat worn out with his labors there, Dr. R. E. Ewan was an interesting visitor. Dr. Ewan was born at Chentu, in the Province of Szechuan, and in the early part of his life he was a student of the Szechuan University. He was a member of the Szechuan University, and he was a member of the Szechuan University.

How Other Half Lives.

The Chinese are not less in number than the usual estimate of 400,000,000. Dr. Ewan thinks, and his own province has 60,000,000. The people live on the land, and have few cash crops. There is a buffalo used for draught purposes and plowing, and the mountain sheep are the favorite animal for food. Meat is not procured, and fifty per cent. of the people live from hand to mouth, and the doctor thinks that the Chinese are a very poor people.

Dr. Ewan's work has been very successful and the hospital is always full, patients coming and departing every day. At first there were some prejudices to overcome, but the simple operations being objected to, but the Chinese are becoming more and more friendly to the work.

Dr. Ewan thinks that the Chinese are a very poor people, and that they are a very poor people. He thinks that the Chinese are a very poor people, and that they are a very poor people.
